Today

Lincoln and Washington. And Don't Forget Edison. A $10,000,000 Racket. Imitation Ice Age.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HAD Lincoln lived until now this would be his 120th birthday. Men have lived beyond that age, but not men that lived as Lincoln did, giving to the world's welfare everything in them, and in the end life itself.

THIS country possesses two great men that stand apart, Washington and Lincoln. Beside them all others are as foothills beside mountain peaks.

It is doubtful whether any nation could produce in a dozen centuries or more of history the equals of Washington and Lincoln, born less than eighty years apart.

Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon may have excelled Washington in military genius. They did not surpass him in courage, or equal him in character, or useful work.

As for Lincoln, whose birthday this is, no name stands above his.

THOMAS A. EDISON, 82 yesterday, hopes soon to have rubber growing commercially in the United States.

This country would be much obliged if he could plant a tree that would produce a few more Edisons.

THE grand old man, whose immortality of usefulness is safe for all time, says "I don't know anyone who is happy." Certainly not. To be happy means to stop trying. Wise providence keeps us unhappy, and at work.

Natives of the baboon country, crouching beside a dead hippotamus, are all happy, but not useful.

MR. EDISON found 1,200 plants producing rubber, and will cultivate 40 of them.

Some day a chemist will announce a synthetic formula that will make the 1,200 plants unnecessary.

Yesterday Mr. Edison had invited to luncheon Herbert Hoover, Henry Ford, Harvey Firestone, interesting American party of self-made men. What country will match that foursome?

SPEAKING of Americans, it appears that their numbers from without increase more rapidly than is generally known.

Mr. Cyrus H. K. Curtis, indefatigably curious, finds that 200,000 enter the United States every year secretly, in a "back-gate-crashing" manner.

More than 1,000,000 immigrants have come in illegally since the quota law was passed in 1924.

This "immigrant smuggling racket" yields $10,000,000 a year profit.

AN imitation of the ancient ice age afflicts Europe, from Scandinavia to the Balkans. Many towns are frozen in, threatened with food and fuel shortage. Scores of ships are held in a Baltic ice jam. Ogradsko, a Jugo-Slavian Mohammedan town, was buried under snow for nine days. Troops finally freed the 3,000 inhabitants.

DENMARK, Germany, Greece and Turkey have suffered. Two skaters crossed from Denmark to Sweden. One thousand two hundred miles of the Danube River have been frozen, and blocked with ice. Those who have gone down that swift river from Vienna to Budapest can realize what the cold must have been, lowest temperature since 1860.

With all our complaining we have great cause for gratitude.

Think of Florida, California, Georgia, and the whole Gulf coast.

WALL STREET, refreshed by resting Saturday and Sunday, went to work yesterday, convinced that the world had not quite come to an end, and even a benevolent regulating Federal Reserve might be endured.

Some for whom this is the beginning of the spring lamb season, the unhappy wiped-out minority that tried the "faw down, go broke" experience, will know better next time. Others will know better later.

Invest within your means, in America, and you get rich. Gamble here or anywhere, and gambling gets you.

MEXICAN revolutionists evidently plan continuous war against the Mexican government and its "religious" laws.

FORD GIVES EDISON $5,000,000 FOR INSTITUTE FUND

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Thomas Edison today has a $5,000,000 birthday gift from his friend Henry Ford. The gift received by the inventor on his eighty-second birthday yesterday was in the form of a fund to complete the Edison Institute of Technology and Museum of American Industries at Dearborn, Mich., and was made to the Edison Pioneers at their annual meeting here.

Edison

The Edisonian collection of the society will be moved to Dearborn to be placed with Ford's collection in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary in October of the lighting of the first electric bulb at Menlo Park, N. J.

Edison's original workshops are being reassembled at Dearborn where 8,000 students are engaged in electrical research in the Edison institute.

The $5,000,000 gift, Ford said is his tribute to Edison's "unparalleled life of achievement" and his contribution to the celebration of the birthday of the incandescent light.

ASSEMBLY TO PASS ON GAS TAX BOOST

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 12.—A bill, with administration backing to increase the tax on gasoline, will be introduced in the Legislature, Gov. Fisher admitted today. This bill will be largely for the information of the Legislature to do with as it sees fit, administration spokesmen say.

Gov. Fisher and Secretary Stuart disagree on the more important highway needs. The governor in his message to the Legislature stressed funds for township roads, while Secretary Stuart played that angle down and stressed the city street repair question. The governor believes there ought to be a decided increase in the money paid for township rewards, and perhaps state-aid.

BOY POET DIES BY POISON

George Miller was only 17, but he was sad.

He was ambitious, too. He planned to get a job on a New York newspaper and to work his way through Yale. Knowledge meant much to George, who was always reading.

He graduated from the Wilkinsburg High School in 1928, standing well in his classes, and he spent much time reading at the Carnegie Library. Frequently he read Schopenhauer, imbibing dark, sad thoughts from that German philosopher's "Essays in Pessimism."

He translated much of that pessimism into verse. His schoolmates thought it peculiar. He had another peculiarity—he would not face a camera. Even when all his classmates were comparing their pictures taken for the class year book, George stood apart and would not pose.

But his real world was far away, in New York and Yale. Last August he started out to the conquest of that world.

Today his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, of 419 South avenue, Wil-

DOCTOR'S PLEA FOR MERCY TO BEATEN VICTIM DENIED

By Staff Correspondent of Sun-Telegraph.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 12.—Gov. Fisher today announced he had requested the Pittsburgh Coal Company to furnish him with information regarding the killing of John Borkoski, a Santiago miner, by two policemen employed by the company. The Governor wants the data with a view of passing a revocation of their commissions as coal and iron policemen.

Revocation of the commissions is the only step that can be taken by the Governor. Any prosecutions must came from the district attorney of Allegheny County, the Governor's office pointed out.

DOCTOR PLEADED

"For God's sake, don't beat him anymore—he's dying."

So pleaded a physician to two policemen of the Pittsburgh Coal Company who are held for beating to death John Burcosky, miner-farmer, the county detectives revealed today after they had arrested a third coal and iron policeman, Lieut. W. J. Lyster, in charge of the company's Imperial barracks.

It happened in the barracks. Lyster and the other two policemen, Frank Slapikis and H. P. Watts, charged with murder. Dr. J. B. Patterson and John Higgins were there.

Burcosky, Santiago father of four children, had been dragged from his mother-in-law's home and hammered with a revolver, poker, brass knucklers and blackjacks and then jumped upon when Dr. Patterson pleaded with the policemen to halt, Higgins told the detectives.

AWAIT GRILLING

Today, Lyster, held without bail along with his two aides, sat in District Attorney Gardner's office awaiting a barrage of questions. In the next room sat the distrait mother-in-law of Burcosky, Mrs. Mary Blussick, anxious to tell how Policemen Slapikis and Watts entered her home last Saturday night, drank moonshine and precipitated a riot.

And as they awaited the action of the district attorney, a telegram was speeding to Gov. Fisher bearing the protest of the Pittsburgh branch of the American Civil Liberties Union against the "outrageous tactics" of the coal and iron policemen.

BRANDON JIBE PUTS ROSENBERG IN CELL

Morals Court was thrown into an uproar and Attorney Samuel S. Rosenberg was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct, today when he clashed with Magistrate A. D. Brandon at a hearing in the case of Special Detective Harry Fink, Hill district, charged with a serious offense.

Rosenberg, counsel for Fink, who operates out of the office of Alderman John J. Verona, objected to a ruling that his questions addressed to Betty Milton, who appeared as a witness against Fink, were irrelevant.

"Quit squawking like an old woman every time I ask her a question," shouted Rosenberg.

He was seized by attendants, ejected and lodged in a cell. The hearing of Fink was continued until he can engage other counsel. Rosenberg was released later on $30 forfeit for a hearing tomorrow.

The two groups will meet for a friendly discussion of the "blue law" modification bill, sponsored in the State Legislature by the association.

Dr. Zahniser, commenting on the meeting, declared:

"We are very anxious to meet the group and discuss the issue in a friendly and sane manner."

He said he was not yet prepared to disclose the names of the ministers who will be present, but added he would do so later in the day.

Officers and members of the Association for the Modification of the Blue Laws of 1794 who will attend are A. W. Wyckoff, William B. Rodgers, J. W. Cree, Jr., Miss H. Marie Dermitt, J. H. Hillman, Jr., Stewart C. McFarland, Frank Wilbur Main and Wilmer M. Jacoby.

"The meeting will be quite informal," declared Wilmer M. Jacoby, a member of the association's executive committee. "We shall give the ministers every opportunity to discuss the provisions of the bill and to offer constructive criticism and suggestions. We are open-minded on the subject of modification of the blue laws and quite willing to listen to suggestions from the other side."

FISHER BILL PUTS TAXES UNDER REVENUE SECRETARY

BAN ON LAKE CARGO CUT ATTACKED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Challenging the right of the Interstate Commerce Commission to prohibit the reduction by Southern railroads of rates on coal shipped to lake ports, John W. Davis and other counsel for coal operators in Southern West Virginia, Eastern Kentucky, Northern Tennessee and Virginia filed in the Supreme Court yesterday a brief to be used when the lake cargo coal cases are reached for oral argument next week.

The brief asserted that the order of the Commission in prohibiting Southern carriers from making a 20 cents a ton reduction to meet a similar reduction by Northern railroads, which the Commission had approved, was an effort to equalize industrial conditions in the Northern and Southern coal fields, and exceeded the Commission's authority. The Commission sought to apply some remedy, the brief added, to relieve the distressed economic conditions shown to exist in the coal fields of Pennsylvania and Ohio.

COURT DECLARED CORRECT

The statutory three-judge Federal Court at Charleston, W. Va., was correct in setting aside the Commission's order, the brief declared, insisting that the Commission had no power to prohibit a lawful rate on the ground it was unreasonably low.

The brief contended the Commission exceeded its authority when it condemned reduced rates and also questioned the power of the Commission to set aside reduced rates when it was not shown that the reduction would seriously injure the carriers making them.

REDUCTION UPHELD

The Southern railroads have the right to reduce rates, it declared, and the order of the commission was invalid because it constituted an unlawful invasion of the managerial rights of the Southern carriers.

The commission was wrong, the brief stated, in its conclusions that one carrier could not reduce its rates simply because it changed the relation with the rates of other carriers serving competing shippers; that it had the right to condemn a rate because it would impair the aggregate net railway operating income of the carriers; that it could compel the carriers making the reduction to furnish evidence to justify it, and that the law prohibiting "unjust and unreasonable" rates was aimed to apply against low rates rather than against excessively high rates.

HOOVER FISHING TRIP OFF

By GEORGE E. DURNO.
International News Service.

FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 12.—Herbert Hoover was back on his way to Miami Beach and the pre-inaugural headquarters on Belle Isle today, having abandoned a long-planned two-day fishing trip along Florida's west coast. The President-elect, who spent last night aboard the houseboat Saunterer at anchor off Punta Rassa, about 25 miles from here, according to his latest decision will land either at Punta Rassa or some nearby point and motor back across state over the Tamiami trail to Miami Beach.

Joseph E. Murphy, assistant chief of the United States Secret Service, said the fishing trip had been abandoned because of a decided change in the weather. Within the last 24 hours, the thermometer here has dropped many degrees.

Mr. Hoover left here yesterday afternoon after attending the party given in honor of the eighty-second birthday of Thomas A. Edison, the world's foremost inventor. With him he carried the assurances of the agile octogenarian that the Hoover administration was going to be one under which the nation would prosper.

Collins, Children's Service Bureau worker, seven witnesses testified today in the trial of the three men for extortion and conspiracy, as a sequel to the county grand jury investigation.

Costs of $13.45 on each slot machine were assessed, with the agreement that Collins would drop cases he had started, the witnesses testified. Payment often was made by mail in response to a summons, with the offender never seeing the man who had accused him, they said.

The witnesses were Theodore France, 222 Federal street; B. Plonski, 3353 Penn avenue; Thompson E. Roberts, 410 Independence street; Clide Stewart, 1222 Braddock avenue; Mike Simon, 228 Sixth street, Braddock; A. F. Ashburn, Comrie street, Braddock, and Samuel Lamfrom, 78 Southern avenue.

FLAG CONTEST INTEREST HIGH

Interest in the Flag Contest, of the United States Flag Association, which is being sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers is running at a high pitch. School children between the ages of 14 and 18 throughout Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky have written to the Flag Contest Editor at the Sun-Telegraph inquiring how they could compete in this great educational and patriotic study of the American Flag and try to win the free trip around the world offered the winners.

Today, in scores of schools, children will be reading the first questions on the contest, that were published in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph yesterday.

Every school, organization or club can conduct a local flag contest of its own application to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. The contest consists of answering 75 questions on the American Flag and writing a short essay on "Old Glory's Greatest Glory," of such length that it can be recited in five minutes.

RULES OF CONTEST

The condensed rules and regulations governing the contest are repeated herewith for the benefit of those who have not already seen them, and a complete set of these regulations will be furnished those who apply to conduct contests:

1. The contest is open to every boy and girl in the United States, regardless of race, creed and color, between the ages of 14 and 18, on Flag Day, June 14, this year, provided they, or their parents or guardians, are not employed by any Hearst Newspaper or Hearst Newspaper organization. Boys and girls whose eighteenth birthday falls on Flag Day are eligible to compete, but those whose birthday comes before that date are ineligible.

2. Boys will compete only against boys and girls only against girls, each receiving identical awards.

3. Contests will be conducted in the various communities of the United States by public high schools.

FISHER PROBES KILLING; 3RD MINE GUARD JAILED

tality was unfolded to County Detective Frank Ritz and Robert McMillan this morning by Higgins, who was dragged to the Imperial barracks along with Burcosky.

Higgins was located yesterday in the borough lockup at Leetsdale, where he had been lodged by Constable Ross Schaffer of Sewickley into whose custody the two men were given after the man-killing orgy in the police barracks.

Dr. Patterson was called to administer to Higgins, Burcosky and Watts, who was stabbed in the shoulder in a drunken melee at the home of Mrs. Mary Blussick—a fight which Burcosky attempted to break up.

DOCTOR RETICENT

Dr. Patterson, today, declined to relate what he saw at the barracks. Neither would he tell who called him, but questioning brought out his opinion that Burcosky's condition was "critical" when he attended him.

He said he was called to the barracks "sometime after 1 o'clock" and he remained until "nearly 4." During this time, he said, he had been called upon to administer to three men—Burcosky, Higgins and Watts.

He said Watts had been stabbed in the shoulder, the wound being about an inch deep in the muscle part of the shoulder. Higgins was suffering from bruises and cuts about the head and face, he said.

The physician objected to being quoted as having said "don't beat him anymore," but admitted that he urged the frenzied coal company officers to "stop it." He refused to say what he meant by "it."

COAL OFFICIALS QUESTIONED

Officials of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, questioned as to what course they propose to pursue in their investigation of the case, issued the following statement through C. E. Lesher, executive vice president:

"The Pittsburgh Coal Company is making a rigid investigation in the death of John Burcosky. The company does not condone brutality, nor infractions of the law. It has always stood for the maintenance of law and order. Its officials have assured the county authorities of the fullest possible assistance in conducting their investigation."

Higgins, himself a former coal and iron policeman in the employ of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, related how he attempted to intervene when Lieut. Lyster "stripped for action" and started for Burcosky with an iron poker while the prostrate man lay moaning in agony on the barracks floor.

USED POKER

"Get out—you're getting as bad as those damned Hunkies," Higgins said Lyster spat at him, shoving him aside and lashing Burcosky across the head with a poker. The iron rod bent almost double, Higgins said, and Lyster straightened it out with his foot and started in again.

Watts, Higgins declared, began to kick Burcosky and ended by jumping with both feet on the unconscious man's chest, crushing his ribs. Higgins said he buried his face in his hands, unable to stand the gruesome sight, but heard Burcosky's agonized gasp and the crunching of breaking bones as the frenzied officer jumped up and down, crushing his ribs.

Constable Schaffer was in another room asleep, and Slapikis stood mutely by, Higgins said.

WILL QUIZ DOCTOR

Higgins said he was taken to Leetsdale by Schaffer, who took Burcosky to Sewickley Valley Hospital where he died a few hours later.

A number of witnesses are being questioned today, among them being Burcosky's mother-in-law and Patrick Caruso, a friend with whom Burcosky was visiting at Mrs. Blussick's home Saturday night. Dr. Patterson also will be questioned by county detectives today and it is probable that Schaffer will be called in for further examination.

Schaffer was a "sick" man last night, according to Detective Ritz, who brought him into Chief George Murren's office with Lieut. Lyster.

CONSTABLE PENITENT

Why he stood by and permitted the murder of Burcosky and why he delayed in removing his prisoners from the Imperial barracks, he was unable to explain to detectives last night. He admitted, according to Detective Ritz, that he had been negligent in the performance of his duty, but intimated that he was afraid of the coal and iron officers.

Mrs. Sophie Burcosky, the grieving widow, and her four children are in a pitiful plight. Burcosky but three months ago rented the farm where they make their home, hoping to be able to give up mining as soon as he got the property on a "paying basis."

The saddened widow and her little brood face a future alone. They were entirely dependent upon the earnings of Burcosky in the mine and only recently he was compelled to borrow money to purchase farm machinery and stock.

LITTLE FINANCIAL AID

Mrs. Burcosky has three brothers and three sisters, all married and with obligations of their own. Her mother ekes out a living by "taking in boarders" and the fatherless group can expect little financial help from this quarter.

"What can I do?" the broken-hearted mother sobbed in answer to an inquiry.

"John is 17—he can quit school and go to work, but we cannot live on his earnings alone. The other children are too young to work. Helen is 15; Martha, 12, and Anthony only 10. They have to go to school, but how we are to manage is beyond me."

Today the grief-stricken family made preparations for the funeral tomorrow. Arrangements were being made at the St. Columbus Roman Catholic Church, of which Burcosky was a member, and it was planned to lay the slain man to rest in a nearby cemetery.

Boosters of City To Plan Radio Drive

The publicity campaign, the first of the five plans to be undertaken by the Chamber of Commerce for spreading Pittsburgh's fame throughout the world, will be discussed at a meeting of council organizations of the Chamber tonight at a dinner in the Chamber dining room. J. C. McQuiston, of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company will tell of plans for broadcasting radio programs as part of the publicity drive. John Emmet Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, is to address the [illegible] leaders.

POLICE BAN ON COASTING LIKELY

Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh today was planning added vigilance against coasting accidents following yesterday's crashes in which nine persons were injured.

Walsh is expected to instruct the police to eliminate all coasting from streets which have not been set off for that purpose.

Many of the coasting accidents of the season have occurred on streets which the police department has banned sled riding.

A man and a boy are in hospitals in serious condition today and two other boys are suffering body bruises and cuts, as a result of coasting accidents last night. Two of the boys were injured in accidents on the North Side. The man was hurt when hit by a sled in Knoxville and the fourth victim suffered his injuries in Wilmerding.

SKULL FRACTURED

John Cinci, 49, of 200 Camfield street, Bon Air, suffered a probable skull fracture and lacerations when struck by a sled ridden by Thomas Dougherty, 14, of 118 Schuecert street, Bon Air, at Alice street and McKinley avenue. Cinci was taken to the South Side Hospital.

When his sled ran into an automobile parked in Buena Vista street, Albert Tedford, 6, of Buena Vista street, suffered lacerations and was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital.

Theodore Hensel, 16, of 24 Jackson street, was treated at the Presbyterian for similar injuries after his sled was struck by a machine driven, police said, by Mrs. Anna Pohl, 40, of 1809 Sunderman street, near the scene of the Tedford accident.

GIRL'S MEMORY BACK

Five youngsters were injured when a sled collided with a group of skaters at Virginia avenue and Olympia street yesterday. Marjorie Donahue, 123 Oakmont street, the most severely injured, was reported recovering today from the loss of memory which followed the accident. The girl was not otherwise injured.

CRASHES INTO POLE

Crashing into a pole while coasting in Wilmerding, John Bruce, 13, of Patterson street, Wilmerding, sustained severe lacerations and bruises.

His condition is regarded as serious at the McKeesport Hospital. It is believed he suffered internal injuries also.

BRADDOCK GIRL HELD IN THEFT

City detectives late yesterday arrested Helen Radio, 26, of Beech street, North Braddock, in a downtown store on a charge of shoplifting. Police said when they searched her home they found between $500 and $600 worth of merchandise.

About $75 worth of the loot was identified as that taken from Murphy's Five and Ten Cent store, Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, and an information was sworn against her charging her with larceny on this count before Justice of the Peace M. T. Gorham, of East Pittsburgh. A detainer will be lodged against her in Morals Court today by Gorham's constable.

LILY LANGTRY, STAR, DIES

circles in London, Paris and New York.

She was married to Edward Langtry, an Englishman with a modest fortune. The Langtrys went to London. Her beauty and grace won her a place in society, despite the obscurity of her family and the lack of a great fortune.

Sir John Millais presented Mrs. Langtry to the Prince of Wales (later King Edward VII), who was charmed by her vivacity and wit. Almost overnight she became famous as the "Jersey Lily." Society women sought to imitate the "Langtry modes" and her fashion of dressing.

Edward Langtry's fortune could not stand the pace, so his wife turned to the stage.

England paid millions to see her for the "Jersey Lily's" fame was empire-wide. She visited the United States and was received with enthusiasm, not only by theater goers, but by members of the "400."

Langtry was completely overshadowed. He found he had married a wife, but obtained a "social lioness." He sued for a separation and obtained it. Mrs. Langtry failed twice to get a divorce, but finally obtained it in the California courts in 1897.

DIES IN ASYLUM

Langtry later died in an insane asylum.

One of the most talked-of incidents in the life of the actress-beauty concerned the late King Edward VII. Mrs. Langtry, in the course of a gay dinner party, was said to have slipped a piece ice from her water glass and dropped it down the King's back while he was bending over his plate.

Mrs. Langtry's name, during her colorful career, was linked with those of many notables, including Sir George Chetwynd, the Marquis of Lonsdale, Sir Robert Peel and Lord Rosslyn.

FISCAL CODE LAUNCHED IN HOUSE

HARRISBURG, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—The administration bill placing into operation the new department of revenue, made its appearance in the Legislature last night in the form of a state code.

Introduced in the House by Representative Philip Sterling, of Philadelphia, the measure, in short, places responsibility for the collection of all state taxes with a few exceptions, in the secretary of revenue, yet to be appointed. Sterling is chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means.

The measure places assessment of the five mills tax and all other taxes now collected by the auditor general in conjunction with the state treasurer, in the head of the new department, his decisions to be subject to approval of the auditor general.

INSTITUTIONS AFFECTED

One other major change in the present system of the collection of revenues makes it compulsory for all moneys collected by state institutions to be turned into the state treasury and gives the Legislature authority to appropriate the total funds necessary for maintenance of the institutions as well as for new constructions and repairs.

Under the existent procedure, only a partial amount is set aside by legislative apportionment, leaving the remainder of the expense to be met by the collection from patients, which is administered by the boards of the institutions. The new law would have the effect of giving the Legislature greater supervisory powers over the expenditure of the funds for maintenance.

The bill, a voluminous document of several scores of typewritten pages, was the culmination of two separate and protracted conferences held here during the last several weeks by Gov. Fisher with Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, and W. L. Mellon, former chairman of the Republican State Committee. It defines and realigns the duties of the auditor general and state treasurer, as well as sets up the proposed revenue department.

GAS TAX BROUGHT UP

As such, it was the chief object of discussion as the General Assembly met again. Attention of the legislators was also drawn, however, to the question of a proposed increase in the gasoline tax with the submittal of an open statement by Secretary of Highways James Lyall Stuart to Senator Clarence J. Buckman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Roads and Highways, in which the Highway Department head estimated that $15,000,000 above present revenues is needed to continue the present road-building program and to take over the city streets carrying primary state highways and county bridges, as recommended by the Governor.

The statement had added significance in the transfer of the department's bureau of motor vehicles to the new Revenue Department, as provided in the new fiscal code. In addition to that, presentation of the new motor code today left cause for conjecture as to how that would affect the road situation. It has been reported at various times recently that increases in the fees for drivers' licenses as well as registration of motor buses would be incorporated in the new measure.

Both these measures will have the support of the Governor in the Legislature, which will act as an added incentive toward their passage.

NEW FACTS ABOUT ABRAHAM LINCOLN AT GETTYSBURG

NEW FACTS ABOUT LINCOLN'S VISIT TO GETTYSBURG TOLD BY SURVIVOR

TODAY is the one hundred and twentieth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. On this day, when the thoughts of the entire civilized world are bound up in sacred memory of the kindly, gentle man who pledged America to "a new birth of freedom," the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph presents many hitherto unpublished incidents of Lincoln's visit to Gettysburg battlefield, where his immortal address at the dedication of the National Cemetery on November 19, 1863 was given. These facts have been obtained from one of the last survivors of that memorable day.

GETTYSBURG, PA., Feb. 12—While Lincoln's Gettysburg address echoes down the ages, a survivor of the eventful November day in 1863, recounting the circumstances of that immortal speech, dispels many fanciful traditions and myths of the martyred President's visit to the great battlefield of the Civil war.

W. H. Tipton, lifelong resident of Gettysburg, former legislator and photographer of world-wide reputation, who was at Lincoln's side throughout the public ceremonies in the dedication of the National Cemetery here, is regarded as the best first-hand authority on the history of the memorable conflict and the events which followed. Endowed with all his faculties and possessed of a vivid memory, Mr. Tipton, now 78, recalls every important incident in connection with Lincoln's reception and the delivery of his address.

"Lincoln made no speech—no oration—but stood there facing platoons of newly-made graves and in a voice full of sympathy pronounced the words of consecration," is how Mr. Tipton describes the scene. "It was indeed a funeral service for the Civil War dead."

To understand the full meaning of Lincoln's address and the occasion on which it took place, one must remember that the corpses of Union soldiers were being gathered from the ground where they had fallen on all sections of the battlefield and were re-interred in the National Cemetery plot. The work was carried on by contract at $1.59 per body, and the ghastly duty was held in abeyance for two days for the dedication exercises.

The Battle Scars

The town was filled with coffins for the reinterments. The fields of the countryside were scarred as a result of the ruthless and business-like progress of the workmen in charge of the exhumations. The speakers' platform stood in the center of an ampitheater of graves. The audience—men and women from every walk in life, from far and near, and troops of children from the town—crowded in the stony aisles between the clay-mounded sepulchers. It was more than five months after the battle, but there remained crippled soldiers left behind in the York Hospital, and they were given places of honor.

And every man, woman and child in the audience, Mr. Tipton declares, had perhaps lost loved ones in the battle, or remembered at that very moment a husband, son, father, brother or sweetheart faced the cannon's mouth in Virginia or in far-off Tennessee. Lincoln knew their feelings. The sight of so many new graves and the traces of the shell fire, still apparent on the trees and in the surrounding fields, was oppressive.

Lincoln's address closed the program of speaking. For more than an hour Edward Everett had harangued on patriotism with sweeping oratorical flourish. A hymn was sung by a village choir and all were affected by the music which sounded weak and plaintive after the martial strains of the United States Marine Band. A tense pause followed the singing of the hymn.

How Lincoln Looked

Then Lincoln rose to his feet. His long black coat, his black whiskers and his black hair that hung about his high forehead gave him a funereal appearance, but his expression was patient, kindly, sympathetic. He seemed to tower to the sky. A hush fell upon the audience after the people had instinctively moved near the platform. It was a typical Indian summer day and the hour was close to noon.

Lincoln moved forward two or three steps and surveyed the throng of people, his eyes peering above the rims of his spectacles. In his hands he held two small slips of paper on which he had written the text of his remarks. The President's manner was deliberate and Mr. Tipton says that as he looks back over the span of years he is certain that Lincoln must have experienced deep emotion. In a full, modulated voice the speaker began: "Four score and seven years ago——"

"Then there followed," says Mr. Tipton, "the greatest funeral oration I ever heard."

Only once or twice did Lincoln refer to the slips of paper. His voice, while not loud, was pitched that nearly every one heard. His poise was slightly stooped, as one in the contrite attitude of supplication or half-bowed before a tomb. He made only one gesture—a gentle sweep of his right hand when he declared "these dead shall not have died in vain."

His closing words, uttered slowly as his voice fell to a lower reg-

Washington's Only Rival Fails To Get $10

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—George Washington, who could not tell a lie, has a living rival here.

During a stirring sermon on sin, a local preacher offered to give $10 to any one in the congregation who could swear he never had told a lie. The Londoner calmly walked on the platform and claimed the money.

When the preacher reached into his pocket he found he did not have $10 and was forced to defer payment.

Two Butcher Shop Bandits Get $537

Martin Weinberger, butcher, of 4550 Second avenue, was robbed of $537 by two armed men who held him up in his shop last night. Alone in the store when the bandits entered with drawn revolvers, Weinberger was ordered into the rear room.

While one robber covered him with a gun the other scooped up $212 from the cash register. He then returned to the room and took $325 from Weinberger's pocket. Backing out of the store the pair leaped into an automobile and escaped.

HER DREAMS COME TRUE JUST AS MATTER OF DUTY

Eloise Anderson has a profession that few women in the world can claim. All she has to do is to dream about pretty gardens, rose-trellised cottages and wondrous estates.

But the trick is—she has to let her dreams slip on to white paper.

And that makes her perhaps Pittsburgh's only woman landscape architect.

That it's natural for her to want to beautify Pittsburgh may be easily understood. Her people have lived here since before the Declaration of Independence. Her traditions are inevitably intertwined with its hills and valleys, mills and alleys.

ALLEY SKETCHES HOBBY

Sketches of Pittsburgh's alleys, incidentally, constitute her hobby. One of them will be exhibited in the Associated Show, along with some of her sketches of England, where she recently spent a year.

15 SKETCHES AT HARVARD

To very few young women are given the honors so far won by the Pittsburgh maid. Fifteen of her sketches have hung for the past month in the galleries at Harvard University, and the Cambridge School of Architecture, Cambridge, Mass., where she was an honor student. She had her preliminary education at Carnegie Tech and was graduated from Smith College.

"I didn't appreciate Pittsburgh and its contrasts until I came back from Europe," she remarked. "Everything abroad is old. Here, side by side, the old and the new stand together and making faces at each other. Both have their individual beauties. I hope to sketch as many Pittsburgh alleys and scenes as I can. There's Pittsburgh romance in them—and that's enough for me."

Aged Pair's Wish To Be Joined in Death Granted

BERWICK, Pa., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Two weeks ago, on the occasion of the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Paul, the former remarked to assembled friends:

"Folks, wouldn't it be a nice thing, since we have lived together so long, that we should not be separated at all, but that when the first of us dies, the other follow right afterward?"

Both Mr. and Mrs. Paul were in good health at the time.

Parents of Vestris Hero to Get Medal

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—The parents of Michael J. O'Loughlin, radio operator, who remained at his post and sank with the steamer Vestris, will receive the gold medal of the Veteran Wireless Operator's Association.

The medal was presented last night by H. F. J. Maher, president of the Association, to Lindsay Clawford, representative of the Irish Free State, who will carry it to the wireless operator's parents in Camolin, County Wexford, Ireland.

LINCOLN FAVORED TEMPERANCE, BUT OPPOSED PROHIBITION; HEARST PLAN BOOSTED

Abraham Lincoln was not pleased with the idea of prohibition. He paid his respects to prohibitionists in no uncertain terms, as related in Carl Sandburg's "Life of Lincoln." Reformers complained to him that Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, Lincoln's master general and strategist in the Civil War, was wont to drink in the field. Lincoln then made his famous reply that he would like to know Grant's particular brand, so that it could be supplied to his other generals.

In concluding his remarkable peroration, quoted in part below, Lincoln spoke for temperance, not prohibition. In a burst of oratory on that occasion he exclaimed:

"Turn now to the temperance revolution. . . . By it, none wounded in feeling, none injured in interest. . . . Happy day when—all appetites controlled, all matter subjected—mind, all conquering mind, shall live and move, the monarch of the world. Glorious consummation. Hail, fall of fury! Reign of reason, all hail! . . . How nobly distinguished that people who shall have planted and nurtured to maturity both the political and moral freedom of their species."

In his famous address before the Springfield Washingtonian Temperance Society, February 22, 1842, Abraham Lincoln, in eulogizing George Washington on his birthday, said, as quoted on pages 57, 58 and 59 in "Abraham Lincoln, Complete Works," edited by John G. Nicolay and John Hay (Century Company, 1920):

"Denunciations against dram-sellers and dram-drinkers are unjust, as well as impolitic. Let us see. I have not inquired at what period of time the use of intoxicating liquors commenced, nor is it important to know.

"It is sufficient that to all of us who now inhabit the world the practice of drinking them is just as old as the world itself—that is, we have seen the one just as we have seen the other.

"Use and Abuse"

"When all such of us as have now reached the years of maturity first opened our eyes upon the stage of existence we found intoxicating liquors recognized by everybody, used by everybody, repudiated by nobody.

"It commonly entered into the first draught of the infant and the last draught of the dying man. From the sideboard of the parson down to the ragged pocket of the houseless loafer, it was constantly found. Physicians prescribed it in this, that and the other disease; government provided it for soldiers and sailors, and to have a rolling or raising, a husking or hoe-down anywhere about without it was positively insufferable.

"So, too, it was everywhere a respectable article of manufacture and merchandise. The making of it was regarded as an honorable livelihood, and he who could make most was the most enterprising and respectable. Large and small manufactories

Aged Woman's Death Probed; Man Is Held

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 12.—Dr. F. L. Knox, of Claysville, who attended Mrs. Elizabeth Bailey, aged Columbus, O., woman, whose death is being investigated, last night informed Coroner William B. Baker, of Washington County, that there was not the slightest doubt in his mind that she had died of pneumonia.

Samuel Johnson, 50, who was with the woman when she died in the home of Mrs. M. J. Parshall, in Claysville, is being questioned by Columbus authorities in the woman's death. Mrs. Bailey made over her Columbus properties to Johnson before her death.

A record crowd turned out last night in Syria Mosque to hear the German Grand Opera Company sing Richard Wagner's "Die Walkuere." The reception given the company proved to us how popular this brand of opera might be if we had enough opportunity to hear it, and half way through the evening we were happy to learn that the company was guaranteed for anoother season at least, and that we should have more of it.

"Die Walkuere" is the most humanly appealing drama of the "Nibelungen Ring." The fairy lore in the "Reingold" is fascinating; "Siegfried" is lovelier for its sheer melodic effects; in "Goetterdaemmrung" a fateful drama and a vast symphony unfolds and leaves the audience prostrate. But there is a tenderness in each episode during "Die Walkuere," adroitly embellished with Wagner's genius, that sometimes during last night's performance told even in the voices of the singers.

Knoch

The performance, as a whole, was on a par with opera in the best municipal theaters in Germany. Ernest Knoch, who bears a startling resemblance to Wagner, dealt cleverly with his orchestra. In distended position, it must have been difficult for each player to get his signals, as well as for the singers to hear the ensemble and their cues. But the notable fact remains that the conductor played in restrained tone, allowed the singers to be clearly heard at all times, produced effects as nearly as he was able, as they are managed in Bayreuth, and led his forces finally through a third act that was more than satisfying. His second act dragged somewhat, some of the cuts brought a climax perhaps too soon, but, on the other hand, they permitted the opera to proceed without fatigue to a really interested audience.

Juliette Lippe

The singers were all well-seasoned Wagnerians. Juliette Lippe was outstanding in a very even cast. Her "Sieglinde" was a stately performance, far lovelier vocally than the Bayreuth "Sieglinde." In the lower range her notes were able to give unusually dramatic effects to the role, though her high voice was equal to all demands of the score. Anna Scheffler-Schorr's "Bruenhilde" gave no assurance after her "Cry" in the second act that she might rise to such heights in the last. Her pleading was a most sympathetic interpretation of that fine scene. Ottilie Metzger-Lattermann's "Fricka" lacked all shrewishness; she was a wholesome Puritan.

Richord Gross was a most imposing "Wotan," the best singer among the men, possessing dramatic feeling as well as a pleasant natural voice. The part lies a little low for him, but one can imagine nothing lovelier than his farewell as prelude to the "Magic Fire." A fine "Siegmund" is a rarity. Willy Zilken was no exception, although his call to "Waelse" gave us a thrill. Vennet Challis, as "Hunding," was passable only. The chorus of "Walkuere" had a few shrill voices, but during the "Ride" that quality only increased the wildness of the music.

The stage was set in a miniature frame. In "Hunding's Hut" the idea was well conceived, but on the "Walkuere Rock" one missed the vast spaces as background for the gods. The lighting is never well enough studied to disclose the features of the singer. They are dealing with mighty emotions, and can give much of the actor's art as well as the singer's during the slowly unfolding music if the audience can see them. It is easy to forget such conditions, however, if we are permitted to listen to Wagner, for never did another composer pen such themes as the "Walhalla," the "Sword" and the "Siegfried."

Keyes "Fixer" Bares Half-Million Bribes

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—An alleged confession by Ben Getzoff, convicted "fixer" in the recent bribery-conspiracy trial of former District Attorney Asa Keyes, revealing that perhaps $500,000 passed through his hands to "fix" criminal cases, is in the possession of Buron Fitts, Keyes' successor in office.

Fitts, who announced the confession after he had interviewed Getzoff, declared that it would "rock the county to its foundaticns" and that another grand jury investigation of alleged official corruption here would be started and indictments asked against six persons not involved in the recent trial.

AUTO FEE BOOST PART OF NEW MOTOR CODE

By WILLIAM L. GRUNDISH,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 12.—Proposed increases of motor car operators' annual license fees from $1 to $2 and of learners' permits from $2.50 to $3.50 were incorporated in suggested amendments to the state motor code, which were placed before the Legislature today.

Other suggested amendments presented by Representative Charles B. Griffith, of Indiana, included compulsory inspection of all automobiles, the abolition of the 35-mile-an-hour speed limit on open highways and installation of uniform traffic regulations over the entire state.

NO TAX BOOST NEEDED

The introduction of the administration motor code changes, which included the boosts in motor revenues, followed the presentation of a report to the Legislature from Secretary of Highways James L. Stuart in which, despite reports to the contrary, he practically admitted that sufficient funds were available to make a raise in the gasoline tax unnecessary.

1,200 MILES POSSIBLE

The gist of the Stuart statement is this:

No additional gasoline tax is necessary.

Money is available to build 1,200 miles of road.

The additional license fees asked will build 180 additional miles.

If replacement of macadam roads is necessary it can be done by reducing the other mileage.

The city streets included in state routes can be taken over in the same way.

Now, for the proposed changes in the motor code:

The numbers on a registration or license plate must be legible at a distance of 50 feet, front or rear.

Any person who sells a motor car for scrap must apply for a certificate of junk, which will enable the cancellation of title records.

Official brake testing stations are established, putting into effect the standards adopted by the American Engineering Standards Committee.

The Governor is authorized to call for the inspection of automobiles, making such inspection compulsory, a provision brought about by the success of recent safety campaigns.

The 35-mile-an-hour speed limit on open highways is removed.

More stringent regulations against hitch-hikers.

An increase in the normal vision count from 20 to 50 per cent in the examination for an operator's license.

The creation of a uniform traffic regulation system governing the erection of traffic control lights on state highways and in municipalities, regulating the placing of lights and the legal sequence when three light system is used.

Legal speed of buses with pneumatic tires is increased from 30 to 40 miles an hour.

POET, 17, DIES BY POISON ON MOUNTAIN

kinsburg, received news of how that Odyssey had ended.

Her son had, it was evident, taken his own life, on Lamentation Mount, near Meriden, Conn., within sight of New Haven's elms. Within sight too, of the old post road that runs north toward his other goal, the modern world's Bagdad—New York.

Two hikers had found him. There was a vial that had held poison nearby. On a railroad time table he had scribbled this:

"May not the remains be disturbed. Let the snowflakes be my asphodels, and the waiting Connecticut spring have the body in joy the yearning soul shall never know."

It was dated December 31, and Meriden police were of the opinion that young Miller had ended his life on the last day of the year.

His mother believed that he had been in New York most of the time since last August, trying to find work on a New York newspaper. But his quest had been in vain.

WRITES OF FAILURES

She received a letter from him just before Christmas. He had not been able "to catch on," the boy wrote, and things were looking rather black.

"It was just like George," the mother said. "It was the same as that poem he left. He was always talking like that—the strangest lingo."

Her next message came in the form of George's suitcase. It was delivered to her by an express company January 3.

The suitcase was sent from New Haven. From a time table, apparently marked by the boy for the purpose, police were able to trace his movements.

In the legend "Effective December 3, 1928," he had added the figure "one" after the figure "three," making it "December 31, 1928." He had marked the train he had taken from New Haven to Meridan, and the time of arrival at Meridan. He must have done this as the train sped along through the rolling Connecticut hills, with the lighted windows of inns, with their painted signs "Shore Dinners" slipping by.

Then at 6:22 o'clock he reached Meridan, and in the dusk he climbed Lamentation Mount.

Mrs. Miller is a widow. She has two other children, James, 13, and Betty, 9.

2 Held in Robbery Of Gasoline Station

Identified, police say, as the men who had held up a gasoline station in Twenty-ninth street, McKeesport early Sunday, Lacy Richardson, 30, Negro, and James Williams, 24, both of Glassport, were held for court last night by Magistrate James J. Landie of McKeesport. They were charged with highway robbery and were committed to jail without bail.

Frank Opperman, 22, of McKeesport, attendant at the station, testified that he was bound and gagged and $71 was taken from the service station cash register by the two men. He then identified the pair, police say. The men escaped at the time but were taken into custody later.

LEFT TURN BAN AT 8 POINTS PROPOSED

Elimination of left traffic turns at eight downtown intersections has been proposed to Council in a letter from Safety Director James M. Clark. The question probably will be the subject of a public hearing in the near future.

The director, through Traffic Engineer Burton W. Marsh, submitted previously a list about 40 left turn eliminations and was requested by Council to present the proposal in four installments.

Members of Council explained that drivers would be confused with such a number of changes and would therefore add to traffic congestion.

The section affected comprises Sixth avenue, Grant street, Oliver avenue, Bigelow boulevard, Webster avenue and Tunnel street.

Word Awaited Here On N. Y. Subway Bid

Officials of the George H. Flinn Corporation today are awaiting the disposition of their bid of $12,500,000 submitted to the New York Board of Transportation for building two miles of subway on Fulton street, Brooklyn.

The local firm was next to low among 14 bidders, and it seemed uncertain that the contract would be awarded on present figures as the lowest bidder was so far below all other competitors.

Council has received a letter from the American Metal Weather Strip Company requesting the installation of a loading zone in front of its building, 403 Penn avenue.

SUGAR O. K. FOR TEETH, SAYS M.D.

Any and All Food Should Be Brushed From the Teeth After Eating

Who, with any basis of fact, ever said that sugar is harmful to the teeth? An eminent British medical authority recently showed that sugar, perhaps more than any other food, tends to promote the flow of saliva in the mouth, which should be conducive to preserving the teeth in a clean state. He also pointed out that sugar promotes the flow of gastric juice and so is an aid to digestion. Rough foods and fruits are thought to be good for the teeth. How could anyone ever eat them without sugar?

The main thing is to eat a variety of healthful foods and to enjoy them. That's what the teeth are for. Medical authorities are alarmed today that so many girls and also adults are starving themselves in order to reduce weight. This passing fad, in the opinion of many doctors, has become a serious menace to health, frequently causing injuries that are permanent.

Eat enough nourishing food, and remember that sweetness is nature's perfect flavor. Nothing can take the place of sugar in making the whole meal enjoyable. Eat some citrus fruit—sweetened to taste—at least once a day. Take care of your teeth and enjoy eating. The Sugar Institute.

Stubborn Cough Quickly Ended by Famous Recipe

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that usually follow the "flu."

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Don't Fuss With Mustard Plasters

Just Rub Away Pain

Don't mix a mess of mustard, flour and water when you can relieve pain, soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole.

Musterole is made of pure oil of mustard and other helpful ingredients, and takes the place of mustard plasters.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

INSTEAD of exercise

Most headachy, bilious, constipated people are paying the penalty for lack of exercise! Avoid this! Learn the simple secret millions already know—the little exerciser in the vest-pocket box for a dime!

Cascarets are keeping millions fit and sound. They give the bowels as much exercise as they get from an hour of hard play. Oils, salts and ordinary laxatives do not act like Cascarets. These things only produce mechanical or chemical action. You have to keep dosing with them. They actually weaken your bowels.

Each time you use Cascarets your bowels become stronger. They are made from Cascara Sagrada, which stimulates the peristaltic action and exercises the bowel muscles. Nothing else does this. That's why Cascarets are being used at the rate of 20 million boxes a year, and people everywhere depend on them for lasting relief from headaches, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, etc.

REED WANTS SHOWDOWN ON CENSUS APPOINTMENTS

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—In a scorching letter to Director W. M. Steuart, of the Federal Census Bureau, Senator David A. Reed, of Pittsburgh, today demanded that he be informed on the policy of the bureau with respect to the employment of supervisors and enumerators for taking the next decennial census of 1930.

Reed charges that letters have been sent out of Washington under the signature of Director Steuart indicating that it would be the policy of the bureau to appoint all former enumerators engaged in the 1920 census, wherever their services are available for the new population canvass.

BILL NOW PENDING

Pointing out that the last decennial count was conducted under the Wilson administration, and therefore most of the enumerators and supervisors were Democrats, he insisted on having a voice in making Pennsylvania appointments if political considerations are to be a factor.

A bill is now pending in the Senate laying the groundwork for the new census. It is estimated that approximately $40,000,000 will be required for the undertaking, which will be the most extensive population survey in the history of the government.

At least 3,500 enumerators will be required for the State of Pennsylvania, working under 34 district supervisors, officials estimate. All of these jobs will offer attractive salaries for the time employed. Supervisors, for example, will be paid between $1,500 and $2,500 for approximately three months' work, while the vast army of enumerators will receive on an average of $10 per day, it is asserted.

LETTER IS SHOWN

As the basis of his protest, Reed offered a copy of a letter which Director Steuart is declared to have addressed to Peter M. Lowry, of 631 Hillside avenue, Franklin, Pa., a former enumerator. The communication made inquiry as to Lowry's availability for a similar assignment next year.

The Pittsburgh senator, in referring to the Lowry letter, called attention to recent assurances received by him from Steuart in which the latter is alleged to have made representations to the effect that the Census Bureau had no intention of employing its former set of enumerators. He cited the letter as an indication that such was not the case and demanded to know what the bureau's policy would be.

If political considerations are to be thrown aside, Reed said he woud insist that the various local civic organizations and leaders receive a voice in the selection of candidates. Approximately 300 enumerators and at least three superivsors are expected to be employed in Allegheny County alone. The total number of workers for the whole country probably will run over 100,000.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Feb. 12.—When a sled on which they were coasting failed to make a turn and crashed into a pole, Mrs. Anna Nelson, of Second avenue, and Mrs. John Swager, of Eighteenth street, were thrown off. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE MOTHER'S REWARD

By N. FLORENCE LEECH

MRS. MINNIE LOCKE was hurrying to get dinner on the table before the boys came home.

No one looking at her youthful, unlined face, her small, slightly plump body, would have guessed that she was 40 years old. But these spring days Minnie felt 100. All her life, until the last few months, she had been cheerful and happy. But almost overnight, it seemed to her, her sons, boys of 18 and 19, had grown up, and simultaneously she discovered she had outlived her usefulness. The boys bitterly resented a woman's—especially a mother's—interference in their lives.

Of course, they needed someone to make a home for them, prepare their meals, and mend their clothes. But though she worked around the clock, Minnie realized that she did not earn her keep. She had begun to think of herself as a shabby old woman, who lived only for her children, and who had become a burden to them. True, she earned $15 a week in a nearby upholstery shop, but Ernie borrowed most of that, and groceries took the rest.

Dinner was not a pleasant meal. "Nobody wants boiled cabbage and potatoes in warm weather," Jamie complained.

"Sure, they don't," Ernest agreed, with his mouth full.

"Say, mother," he added, "did you mend my blue striped shirt?"

"I haven't had time," she admitted.

Ernest's harsh reply spoiled the entire afternoon for Minnie. She worked through a haze of tears, thinking how useless she was.

The next day was Saturday. On the way home from work, Minnie spent her week's wages recklessly, buying material for an extra good dinner for the boys. Ernie liked hash with poached egg on top. Jamie loved rich chocolate pudding. Poor boys.

Ernie and Jamie enjoyed the meal, and laughed and talked almost like old times. But as soon as they had eaten they hurried to bathe and dress preparatory to going out.

"What time will you be back?" Minnie asked, timidly.

"I don't know," Jamie replied. Ernest ignored the question.

"You can at least say where you are going," she spoke with some spirit.

"Got a date," Ernest grinned. But Jamie, redheaded and fiery tempered, burst out, "It's none of your business, mother."

Ernest came home at midnight, sullen and angry. Minnie was waiting back in the dining room, where she had sandwiches ready.

"What's wrong, dear?" she begged. "Tell mother your troubles."

Ernest unburdened himself, loudly and freely. He and Amy had quarreled, and the engagement was broken. "She won't marry me, 'cause you'd have to live with us," he told his mother, brutally.

Minnie's grief was too acute to find relief in tears. Miserably she went out on the tiny front porch, and her hands clenching and unclenching nervously, waited impatiently for Jamie; Jamie, her baby, who still needed her. The city noises became silent. No cars nor pedestrians passed. She finally heard Jamie's footsteps and rose to meet him.

Jamie sat down heavily. "I'm sick of it all," he muttered. "I want to get away—to be independent!"

"You want to leave—Ridgeland?" she half whispered.

He nodded. "I could too, if—" he paused, then poured out his grievance. He had been out to the fair grounds again, he admitted. "There's a fellow in one of the shows—the man I brought home and you said you didn't like—wants me to go to Petersburg tomorrow night."

"Jamie!" Minnie gasped.

"I can have the job regular," Jamie was saying. "But—I got to stay here and come home early every night and tell you where I've been."

"No, you do not, son," Minnie rose to her feet suddenly. "After tomorrow I will not be here!"

Minnie was up early next morning, and automatically set the table for breakfast. The boys, she knew, would sleep until noon. But she had not closed her eyes all night long.

The day was warm, but not sultry. A cool breeze was blowing. The shrubs and flowers were fresh and lovely. As she walked about slowly, something of the ache in her heart lessened. "The world is so beautiful—and God is good!" she whispered. After a time she sat down under a big tree and opened her lunch, the lunch which she had never expected to eat. Then a hail startled her. A man had jumped out of a big, expensive looking car and was coming toward her.

"Minnie Locke, by all that's lucky!"

"Why—why—it's Tom Cosby!"

"And you remembered me, Minnie!" The big, blond man was down beside her, his hands clasping hers.

"Tom Cosby! And I thought you were in California!"

"Came east on business. Say, I've just come from your old home in Caroline County, looking for you, Min. They gave me your city address." He paused, and his blue eyes spoke eloquently. "I was on my way there when I saw you."

Minnie Locke awakened to life. "I'm glad you found me, Tom. I'm—lonesome!" Then she laughed. "Let's eat these sandwiches as we talk. I seem to remember that you were always hungry."

His laughed boomed out. She noted laugh wrinkles in the corners of his merry blue eyes. "And you, Min, used always to be feeding me! Next to your eyes, it was your cooking that I loved best, Min."

"Oh, Tommy!" Minnie felt no longer elderly, useless, she was middle aged, almost young.

"Well, why not?" He took a big bite of egg sandwich and sampled a bit of watermelon pickle. "Cora died last summer," he stated, simply. "You're still a widow, aren't you, Min?"

She nodded mutely, a hot flush rising to her pale cheeks. Tommy had always been impetuous. They were engaged, years ago, she and Tommy, back in Caroline County. They quarreled, and he married Cora, a town girl. Minnie had met and married Rob Locke. Tommy had gone to California—but now he was back—now he was looking at her as he had when she was 17; was saying the identical words, "I love you, Min!"

"We were going to Washington, the other time," she reminded Tom.

"And—by heck—we'll go there this time," he laughed. "Let's elope now. We can send the boys a night letter."

Late that night, the telegram arrived. Frightened Ernest signed for it, and Jamie ripped it open with unsteady fingers. Together they read the few words, then the slip of yellow paper fluttered to the floor.

"How can we manage without her?" gasped Ernie. Jamie was sobbing, the sobs of a lonesome, heartsick boy. "She hadn't ought 'a done it," he gulped, "we need her so!"

"ASTOUNDING! THAT'S WHAT I SAY OF KONJOLA"

Seventy-Six-Year-Old Pittsburgh Man Finds Glorious Relief from Rheumatism in Advanced Medicine.

Day by day, Konjola, the new medicine, is adding to its fame and friends throughout Pittsburgh and vicinity. The amazing success of this medicine does not rest on promises nor claims, but on a bed-rock foundation of accomplishments and results.

MR. WILL EISENBEIS

Konjola contains no alcohol, nerve-deadening drugs, nor heart-depressing chemicals—it needs no such ingredients for Konjola is a medicine that Nature herself might have compounded. Konjola works at the very fount of the disease and its 32 health-giving, pain-banishing, disease-eliminating elements soon bring that warm glow of returning health surging through the system. It is results that every sufferer wants—not promises, and in Konjola you will find the end of that long and fruitless search for benefits. What a world of hope and cheer there is for all who are ill and who would be well again, in the countless voluntary indorsements from men and women that are received by the Konjola Man, who is at the Dow Drug Company (formerly McCulloch), Penn avenue and Sixth street, this city. Take, as an example, the fine experience Mr. Will Eisenbeis, 716 Fulton street, North Side, Pittsburgh, had with Konjola. A few days ago he called on the Konjola Man and made this astounding statement:

"Astounding, that is what I say of this new Konjola. Although I am seventy-six years old, I look forward to many more years of life; life with glorious health. And to Konjola I owe it all. I suffered dreadfully from neuritis and rheumatism, from which I could get no relief. The sharp, agonizing pains in my back destroyed all pleasure in life. All my life I had enjoyed health, that is, up to the time I was afflicted with these accursed diseases. You can imagine my chagrin when, in my declining years, I was forced to lie awake at night, suffer by day, nursing those ailments—enduring miseries indescribable. Indeed, it was a most discouraging situation.

"I sought health, sought it frantically, and when I heard of Konjola and its wonderful works, I grabbed at this chance for betterment, just like a drowning man clutches at a straw. But Konjola was more than a straw, it gave me a firm foothold on the glorious road to health. I had hardly taken a few doses when I sensed an amazing change throughout my system Then gradually, the aches and pains grew less intense, my muscles and joints became limber and supple. Life took on a brighter aspect. I realize now that Konjola was the medicine I always needed. Firmly do I believe that with a few more weeks treatment I will be permanently relieved of my troubles. Already do I feel like a different person, many years younger. Yes, Konjola is a blessing to suffering humanity."

Day by day more and more happy, grateful indorsements are being added to the files, already overflowing, of this master medicine, Konjola. All that Konjola asks is the chance to make you well. Results are not long in coming when Konjola is put to use.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Company (formerly McCulloch's), Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this master medicine.

RADIO OFFERS LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY PROGRAMS TONIGHT

PATRIOTIC FEATURES TO MARK BROADCASTS

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

LINCOLN the Great Emancipator will live in song and story tonight as radio stations throughout the land unite to celebrate the anniversary of his birth.

Gov. Flem D. Sampson, of Kentucky, will speak on "Lincoln, the Kentuckian," through KDKA at 10:01 at the National Republican Club dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria.

Individual stations have planned to remember Lincoln with very delightful programs. Chief among these will be that from WLW at 10 p. m. when Lincoln's favorite hymns, poems and folk songs will be played and sung.

Excerpts will be given from Lincoln's favorite poem—"Oh, Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud?" Herbert Schaffer, president of the Cincinnati Art Center, will tell of Lincoln's character. A quartet will sing his favorite hymn, "Abide With Me."

GETTYSBURG SPEECH

Norman Sweet, a WLW announcer, will read the Gettysburg speech, while the orchestra plays "Battle Hymn of the Republic" as an accompaniment.

Another feature of WLW programs tonight will be the appearance of Elizabeth Gutman, young American soprano who has introduced many Slavic and Oriental melodies to the concert-going public. She will sing two songs by Stephen Foster, and an aria from "Der Freischutz," by von Weber. She will be heard at 10:30 o'clock with the Cossacks.

The role of ballad writer is one in which James J. Walker, Mayor of New York, is not well known, but his "Will You Love Me in December as You Do in May?" will be a part of the Stromberg-Carlson concert at KDKA, 8 p. m.

WHITEMAN CONCERT

"Song of Songs" and "Limehouse Blues" will be heard on Paul Whiteman's concert through WJAS at 9 o'clock.

Roger Wolfe Kahn, Bert Lytell, the motion picture star; Stella Mayhew, the Williams Sisters and several other headline vaudeville acts will be heard over WCAE during the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Hour at 11 p. m.

It's a Snap to get children to take COD
Liver Oil
When they love the flavor

Here is a real surprise. Genuine Norwegian cod liver oil so delicious children love it. You have to hide the bottle to keep them from taking it all at once.

Yet Scott's Emulsion is made of genuine cod liver oil from the Lofoten Islands. With all the wonderful vitamins A and D, so vital to growing children.

Recommended by Physicians

Physicians have been recommending this particular cod liver oil for 60 years because it is emulsified. Made easy to digest, like cow's milk. And it is quickly absorbed into the system. Never upsets the stomach so is ideal for children.

Wards Off Colds and Grippe

Like radiant sunshine Scott's Emulsion increases resistance to disease. Colds and the grippe find it harder to get started. Used regularly, it puts roses in the cheeks, makes little tots grow sturdy and happy.

All druggists have Scott's Emulsion in two handy sizes. A few cents' worth a day is wonderful protection.

Meditations of a Wife

BY HELEN ROWLAND

It's Swank to Be a "Lady"

THE hardest task of the modern man's life is to keep up with the modern woman. She seems to be trying everything—once!

Just as he gets used to her in one role, presto! she does a lightning-change! And he has to get acquainted with her all over again. It's maddening!

All of which is a gentle way of breaking the glad news that GIRLS HAVE GONE FEMININE! It's swank to be a "perfect lady!"

Bouffant evening frocks and long hair are only superficial symptoms. The smart girl of the moment is OH, so proper! Grandmamma herself, could not have been any more reserved, any shyer, any more punctilious.

Hard-boiled flappers are as distinctly declasse as vamps. And now (Don't faint!) good breeding is actually "good form," again.

Well, what are you boys going to do about it? You have been sighing and moaning for the return of the sweet, old-fashioned girl. And now you've got your wish. She's here with a vengeance.

She has wiped most of the rouge off her cheeks, discarded the mascara around her eyes, and is even going light with the lipstick. Her manners are as irreproachable as though she spent her mornings reading Emily Post and her afternoons with Queen Mary of England.

Even her dancing is positively REE-fined. And she can refuse a cocktail with an air of delicate feminine virtue that is almost a reproach.

Petting is a "cheap and disgusting practice," and against her code; and she would as soon think of promiscuous kissing and public caressing as she would of washing the dishes or taking a bath in the drawing room.

All of this is something of a shock to the younger men, who were just begining to get used to the hard-boiled play girl, and to enjoy finding life one glorious cafeteria, where they helped themselves and managed to skip the bill-collector. They are a little dazed.

But the sad truth is that styles in women have changed. Women have found that the "wild woman" role didn't PAY, and have discarded it. They have discovered that men don't put in a wholesale order for kisses that are given away as free samples, and that fifty-fifty love led but to spinsterhood—or the divorce court. They have learned that woman's winning card is FEMININITY—and now they are bulling the market.

* * *

It is only the girl who is not "in the know" who is still playing the wild woman. All the rest are "perfect ladies." It's swank to be a "lady!"

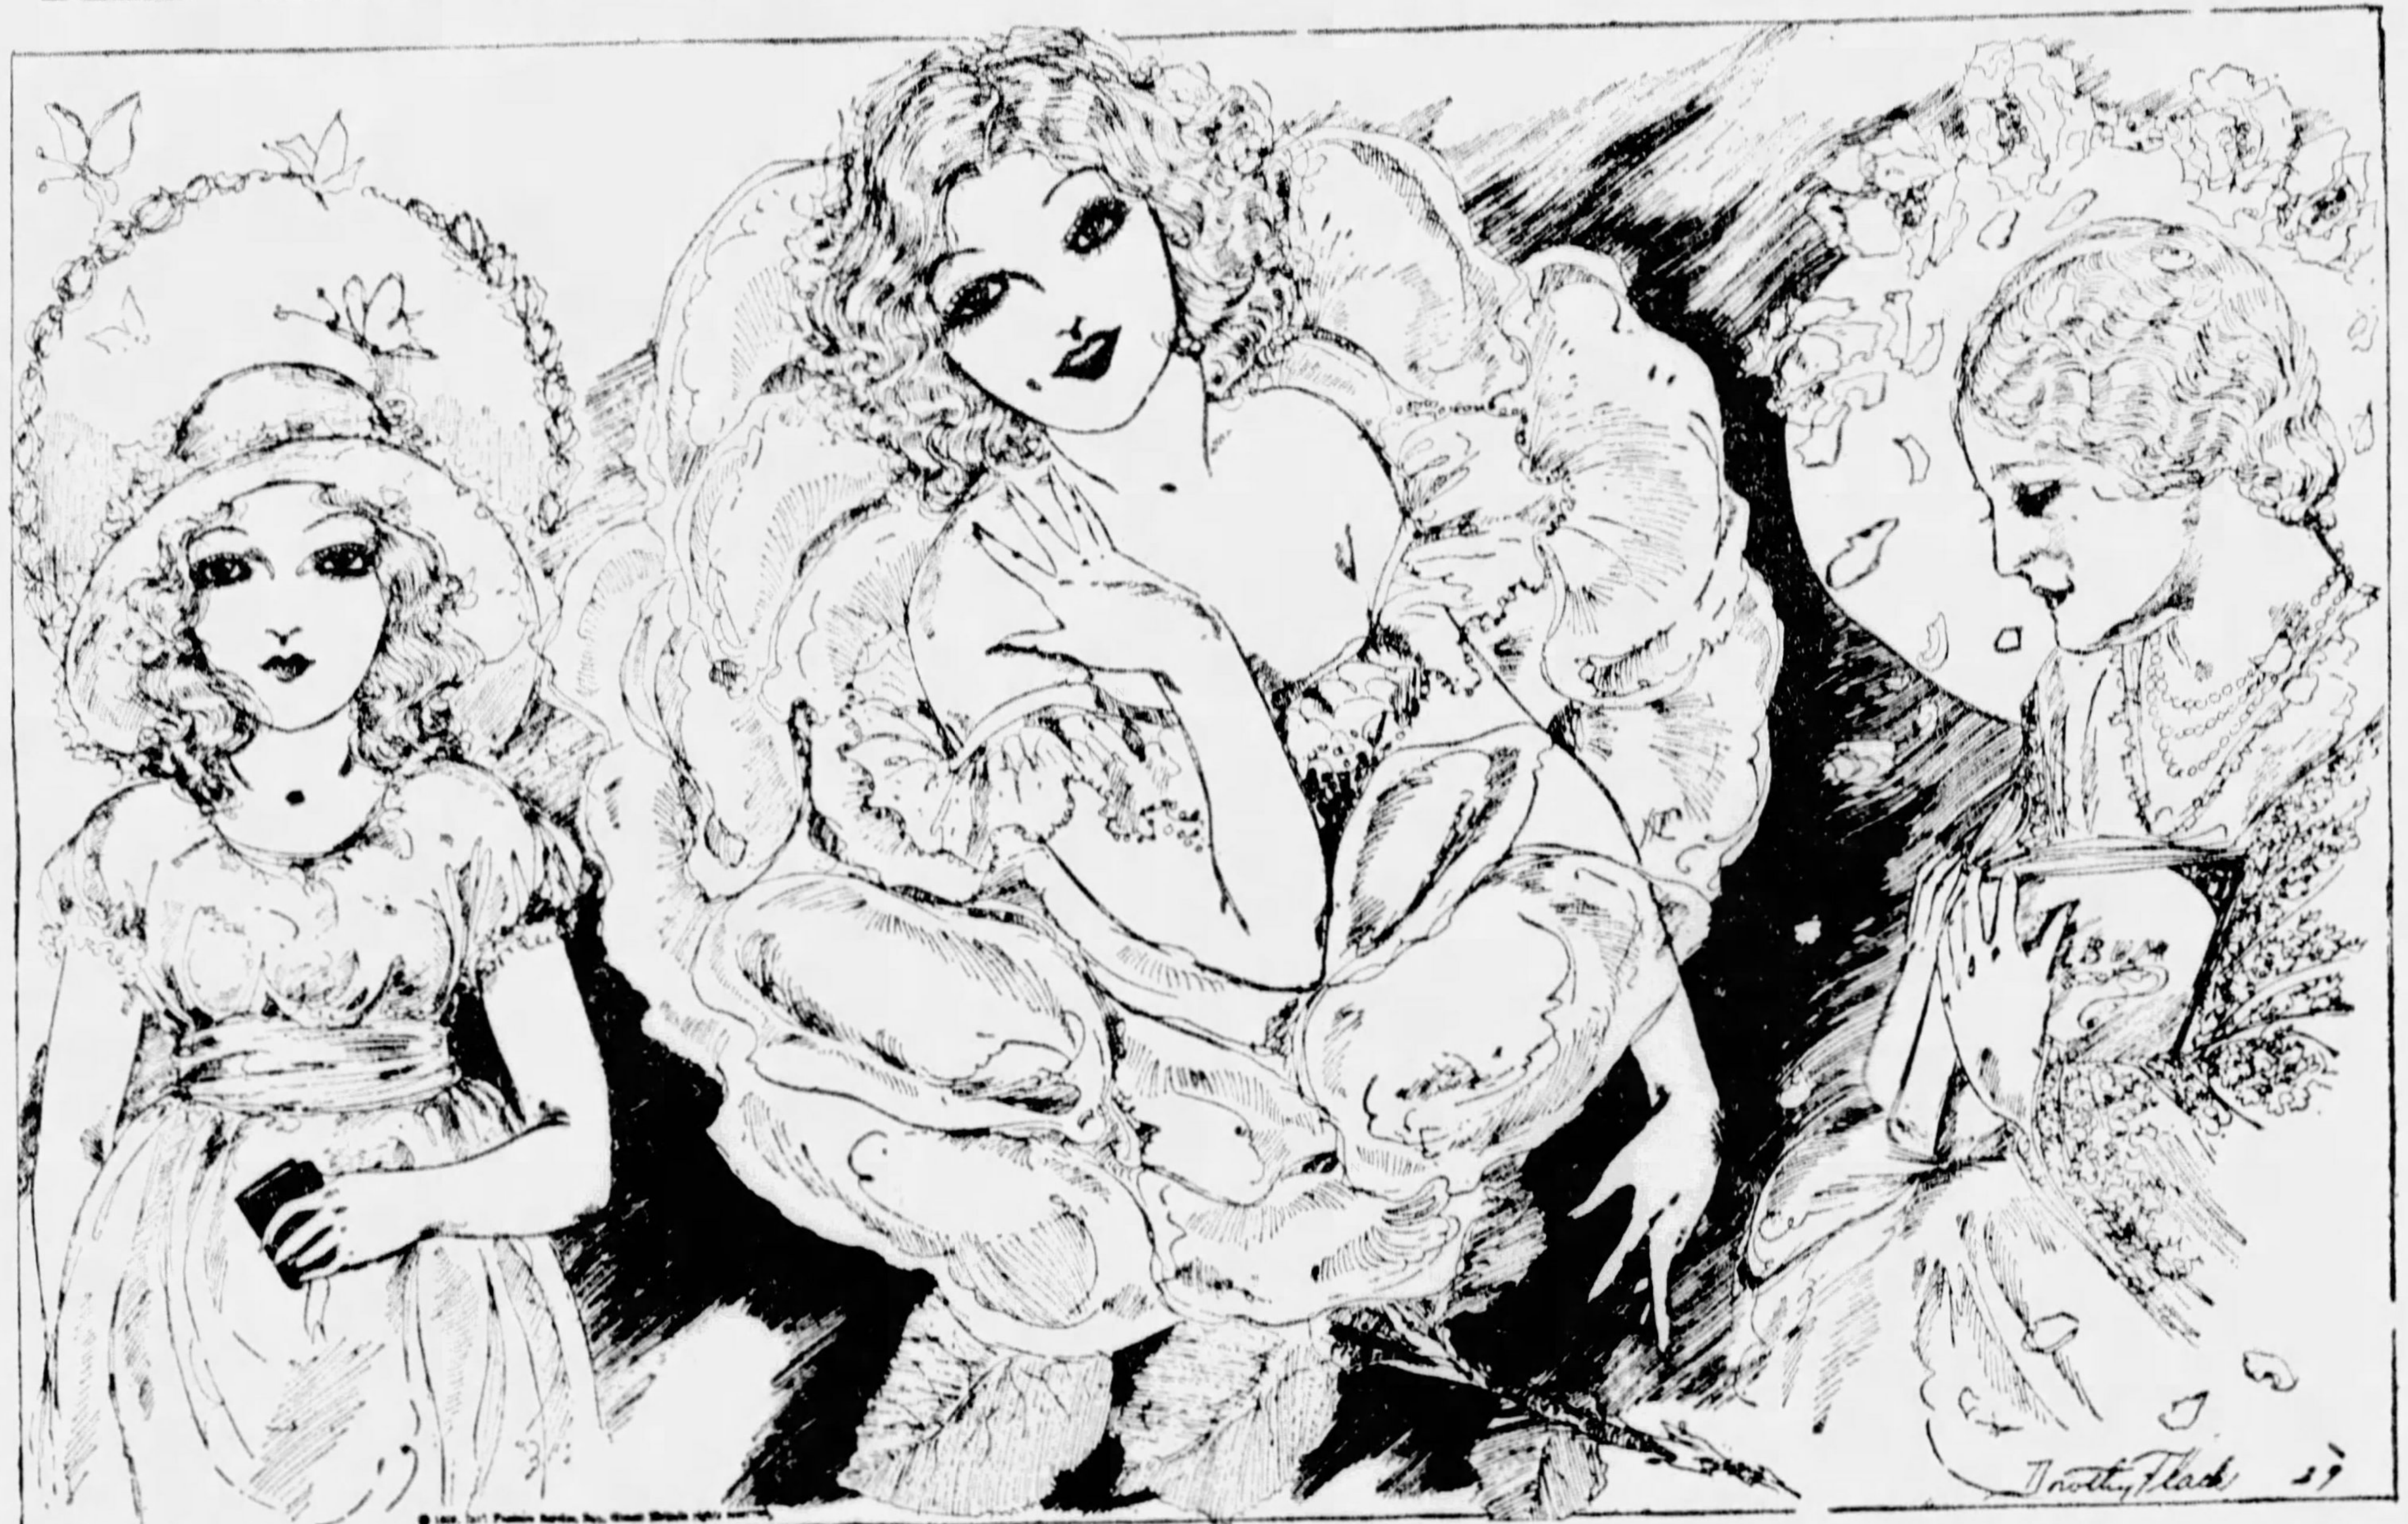
THE LIFE OF A ROSE -:- -:- -:-

Drawn by Dorothy Flack



LIKE a tiny rosebud is the shy sweet girl as she fearfully peers through widened eyes on the vista spread before her. Life is one long sweet dream, with a Prince Charming somewhere in the hazy distance. Her youth and freshness seem ever like a tiny bud unwilling to open, yet loath to remain just a bud. And slowly the leaves unfold and suddenly, without any warning, we see the rose, full-blown, in all its glorious beauty.

And we gasp and stare and unbelieving wonder if this can be the shy rosebud which we tended so carefully but yesterday. And the glory of the rose captures all hearts. And it slowly unfolds leaf by leaf, until it is spread out in a circle of loveliness that makes one think of holy things.

And slowly the full-blown rose droops and each lovely petal crumbles and yellows at the edges, and finally they drop one by one, and then—there's nothing left except the memories of the days that were. And as the rose droops she watches the other rosebuds and roses and wonders what they will think when they are withered and their short day is done.

But each phase has its beauty. The rosebud, with its freshness and shyness; the glory of the full-blown rose; and the sweet haunting perfume of the falling blossom. And ever Love with its comforting presence makes the rose happy.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Sandwiches

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it, or is it not, correct to eat all sandwiches regardless of kind, after cutting with a knife, with your fork? I claim it is. If not, which sandwiches should be eaten with the fingers?

2. Which is correct for business and personal correspondence, the plain white or colored stationery?

A. J.

I AGREE with you. The only sandwiches which in my opinion, should be eaten in the fingers are the sandwiches that are served at teas, where one has to eat the sandwich in one's fingers, usually, and those served at picnics and those served to one without any utensils, as at most soda fountains. In other words, when one may have a knife and fork to use, one should use them in eating sandwiches.

2. Plain white is always correct—for business or social letters, and so is very light gray.

Stopping to Chat

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When a young man meets a young lady and they stop to talk, does the man remove his hat and keep it off during the entire conversation? Or does he just take off his hat on meeting the young lady, and again when he is leaving?

H. AND N.

IF HE is a gallant and polite young man he keeps his hat in his hand during the course of the conversation. However, this can be overdone in bad weather, and the girl who allows a man to stand, when it is very cold or windy or rainy, with his hat in his hand, is not a thoughtful person. The thoughtful girl says, "Please don't keep your hat off. It is very cold," or something that puts him at his ease, and makes it polite that he puts his hat on his head. If the girl is not thus thoughtful, it is quite correct for the young man to say, "Do you mind if I put my hat on? It's rather cold," or something like this.

Katherine Agrees Something Is "Fishy" About Letter

AT my suggestion that Lillian show to Katherine the letter from Samuel Brixton which had so disturbed her and over which her husband was also excited, she rose and went to her desk, returning with the letter which she gave into Katherine's hands.

"I could knit a pair of golf stockings with the wool my wits have accumulated," she said. "But read that over, Katrina, and tell me what you think of it. I'm not going to tell you my reaction to it nor yet Madge's. I want your own unbiased judgment of the screed."

The little nurse took the letter, read it through carefully, then turned to the beginning and read it again. Then she laid it in her lap and looked up at us.

"Please!" she said. "It doesn't seem fair to form a snap judgment of a man one never has seen just from a letter."

"I'd rather trust your 'snap judgment' Katrina," Lillian told her fondly, "than that of a whole raft of diplomats and statesmen. Come on, be a good sport and tell me what you think of it."

"Well! then," Katherine said, "it sounds fishy to me—his offer of restitution, and his sudden wish to visit you."

"Ah!" Lillian drew her breath in sharply. "That makes it unanimous. You, Madge and Harry all have shared my feeling that there's a trick in it somewhere. Allah knows Sam Brixton was the trickiest man in the world in the old days."

"Still," Katherine argued, "what possible object could he have in writing such a letter if he were not on the square? There was no evidence against him, was there, or did Marion's father leave property in which this man had any share, which he has been afraid to claim?"

"Tom—died bankrupt," Lillian said slowly. "The woman he married stripped him completely, and after his death left his poor old mother destitute. Mother Morton came to me and died in my home."

There was a lump in my throat at the simple words. They were so inadequate to describe the devotion with which Lillian had nursed her suffering mother-in-law who weakly had failed her in the great tragedy of my friend's life when Tom Morton, by fraud, took Marion from her.

"Is that wife alive?" Katherine asked.

"No," Lillian returned, "but even so, I have no legal claim on anything — Tom — left — even if I could bring myself to touch a penny of it. That is one thing which makes the letter sound odd. He talks of making repayment to me."

"He's simply 'going through the motions,'" Katherine said. "But of course you're going to see him."

"You, too!" Lillian exclaimed. "That's what Madge told me right off the bat. I realize myself, it's inevitable, and I'm glad to have you both confirm my opinion, but I can assure you I'd almost rather die a nice lingering death than meet that man."

"Oh, no, you wouldn't," the little nurse said briskly. "I've witnessed quite a few exits from this world that I'll bet you'd meet a trillion or two of Brixtons rather than make."

"I know," Lillian said contritely, "I suppose I'm loco on the subject of seeing him. Anyway, there's no use stalling about it. I suppose I must see him!"

"Of course," Katherine agreed promptly, "for Marion's sake, on the chance that the man might be on the square."

Lillian rose abruptly and moved to her desk.

"Will you girls stick around while I draft a note to him?" she asked. "I don't feel sure of my own judgment on anything remotely connected with Samuel Brixton."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, February 13

THE sidereal forces for this day point to great interest and development in professional pursuits and cultural avocations—art, literature, amusements and varied forms of social activity. Venus is dominant in both a practical and idealistic manifestation. It bespeaks romantic adventure, which may be suddenly precipitated. Some abrupt change is indicated. But wise council is admonished. The finances are well aspected, but be slow in new enterprises.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of social, romantic and professional activities with such pleasure as well as profit shown. Be slow in making changes and consider well new projects. Affectional interests may be uppermost.

A child born on this day may be well equipped for social and cultural advancement, excelling in some branch of art. It may also be inventive, original and equal to bold strokes financially. Its life will be pleasant and possibly sensational in its personal experiences.

If one cannot know Art one can at least talk about Art.—Glen Buck.

How to Keep Well

Don't Poke Fun at Victims of Toothache

WE may laugh at the "other fellow" who has a toothache, but it is a real illness. The victim may have no temperature. He may be able to go about his affairs. But nobody can be happy and efficient if the jaw contains an aching tooth. If you have the toothache you feel sick, you look sick, you act sick — and you are sick.

DR. COPELAND

The proper treatment for toothache is not to have it!

This may sound foolish, but it isn't. You may not escape pneumonia or an automobile accident. Either one may be forced upon you. But you know how to escape the toothache. If you have it, it is because you choose to have it—or at least permitted yourself to have it.

No matter how poor you are you should not neglect your teeth. If you are poor, you will be poorer when your teeth begin to ache. You won't be any good at your job and you may lose your position.

If you can't get the money any other way, stay away from the movies for a month and use your savings to pay a dentist. It won't cost much if you begin your visits to the dental office before big cavities have formed or the gums have become diseased.

If you are poor and live in a modern community you can get free dental service through the schools, or the board of health. Every progressive locality has dental clinics.

If you are not so poor, you have no excuse for avoiding the dentist. You can afford to go and you owe it to yourself to attend to your teeth.

If you have early, regular and scientific dental care you won't have the toothache. One way or another you can get such care if you choose to do so. If you don't get it, it is because you deliberately neglected to find relief.

One of the common things a doctor hears is this: "What have I ever done to be sent such suffering!" A good many times the doctor can truthfully reply: "You did nothing, it isn't your fault."

But when a responsible, intelligent, frown-up, free moral agent inquires about the toothache, "Why am I made to suffer this way?"—there is but one answer: "You deliberately elected to have the toothache! It is your own fault!"

But if you have the toothache, it is "crying over spilled milk" to discuss the neglects of the past. The thing to do now is to get rid of the dreadful pain. The dentist has many things at hand besides pulling out the tooth. He may be able to correct the defect in speedy and comfortable fashion. See him at once.

U. S. TO RESUME BANK CHARGES

Government testimony against Guy W. Brown, former state senator, official of two banks and churchmen of Fayette County, on trial in United States Court for embezzlement of bank funds, is expected to be concluded this week.

Details of the alleged manipulation of funds of the Fayette City National Bank, unfolded yesterday by prosecution witnesses, will be resumed tomorrow after an adjournment over today on account of Lincoln's birthday. Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh said probably two more days will be required to present his testimony.

The disappearance or non-existence of makers of notes or drawees of trade acceptances upon which Brown obtained an aggregate of $146,500 from the bank, as contended by the government, together with the close similarity between names of undiscovered makers and names of persons employed by Brown in his coal corporation, were emphasized in the testimony yesterday.

The sway of Brown over the affairs of the defunct institution was apparent from the testimony of associate directors, who told generally of their dependence upon his recommendation in accepting notes for large amounts from persons unknown to them, of whose financial standing they had not the least knowledge.

BEAUTY DOCTORS OR REAL BEAUTY

Any Woman Who Desires Can Be Attractive When Well

You need not envy other women their magnetic qualities. You may be attractive yourself if you desire to. There certainly is a way for any woman by which she can be both desirable and attractive. It is not by buying beautifiers either. They may help in bringing out the good features, but these must be present before they can accomplish much. What constitutes real attractiveness in women is personal magnetism. Some of the ugliest featured women in the world have been the most popular. The really healthful woman is always magnetic. She alone possesses the clear skin, the bright eyes, the lithesome body, that constitute real beauty.

Women who are lethargic and heavy in their movements, whose skin lacks luster and whose eyes are dull, in a very large percentage of cases are suffering from gastric troubles. Their bodies are failing to get the real values out of their food, and their organs are not throwing off the impurities from the blood. Instead of being active filters, removing the impurities from the blood, the kidneys are apt to be inflamed, and the stomach lacks tone. Why? Usually because our modern way of living makes for a sluggish congestion in the mucous membrane that lines the digestive tract, the lungs, and most of the rest of the body. That congestion slows up the bodily processes. A sore stomach cannot digest food well, and the blood must suffer. Sore kidneys and clogged skin cannot take off the bodily wastes, and the blood is not purified. Add to this the constipation that frequently follows, and a woman's attractiveness will be reduced to a very low power.

These conditions are usually evidences of catarrh. Remove this catarrh, wherever it is located, by a systematic treatment and thus give the blood a chance to enrich every part of the body. Then the beauty will appear. The secret of the attractiveness of many women right in this community is found in the clearing up of the system through the use of World's Tonic. Its value in catarrhal conditions is proved by the testimony of thousands. When you are really well, you will always be attractive. Use World's Tonic to make you healthy and beautiful. It can be obtained of all Dow stores (formerly McCulloch), or of any other first class druggist.

H. B. Caldwell M.D.

AT AGE 83

Prescription He Wrote in 1892 is the World's Most Popular Laxative

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

LOANS For Emergencies

Family budgets do not always provide for emergencies. Things happen to all of us, at times, that make additional funds necessary. It may be illness, or taxes. Perhaps, unavoidably, bills have accumulated and must be paid.

The Guarantee Loan Company serves families without regular banking connections. Here you can borrow up to $300—secure the cash usually the same day—and repay in small monthly payments.

Our New Rate NEARLY 1/3 LOWER

Loans payable in twenty equal monthly payments cost as follows:

$ 50	Average Monthly Cost	$ .66
$100	Average Monthly Cost	$1.32
$200	Average Monthly Cost	$2.63
$300	Average Monthly Cost	$3.94

Loans may be paid in full at any time. You pay ONLY for actual time you keep the money.

How We Make Loans

We make loans up to $300 on household goods, to men and their wives for domestic use. We do not require outside signers—signature of husband and wife all that is necessary.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Great Void of Dull Lenten Weeks Yawning at Social World

WITH Lent just a day away from us and a blank date-book facing us, there is little to tell you about excepting bits of news concerning folks who are either away from the city or are planning to leave very shortly. And thoughts about the coming-out parties and other affairs being planned for our "little season" prove to be cold comfort, in the presence of this complete social quiescence.

Now, regarding these travelers— Did you know that another of our debutantes is away just now? This is Rebecca Follansbee, and she is in Bermuda with her father and mother, the John Follansbees, of Squirrel Hill avenue, I understand. Also away from home are Mrs. Howard [illegible] Evans and her daughter, [illegible], who are in Atlantic City for a short visit.

In the East too are Mrs. Howard Hale [illegible] and her daughter, Margaret, who, you remember, is engaged to George Hutchinson Love, of Johnstown. They are in New York, and so are Mrs. Jerome Hill and Mrs. Grant McCargo. And other visitors in Gotham are Mrs. John F. Walton, Jr., Mrs. J. L. Dawson Speer, who took part in the Stage and Film Society performances last week, you remember, and Mrs. Samuel A. Hartwell, Jr. And Mrs. J. Hartwell Hillman and Miss Sara F. [illegible], of Shady avenue, have been spending a short time in New York, too, I hear.

Then, of course, there is always Palm Beach. Among the latest to leave for the Florida resort are Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Jones III, of Edgeworth, who went south last week to stay until spring.

FEW young married people seem to be more widely entertained than the Junior Thomas Morrisons, of Haverford Mansions, Haverford, whose wedding you remember took place early in October. Just to remind you, Mrs. Morrison was Sara Mary Barnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Barnes, of "Four Winds," Haverford, before she was married, and, of course, there is no need in my telling you that Mr. Morrison is a son of the Thomas Morrisons and a brother of Mrs. John S. McKelvey, Jr., of the Schenley Apartments.

A number of parties have been given for the Morrisons since they came back from their wedding trip, and Mrs. Morrison herself has given several "at homes." There is going to be still another affair in their honor, I hear. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilmsen, of Wynnewood, are planning to give a dinner on Saturday night, February 23, in the Philadelphia Country Club.

A PRETTY wedding of yesterday was that of Ida Margaret Haverty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Michael Haverty, of Aylesboro avenue, and Joseph Girard Wagner, son of Milton Wagner, of Sidney, O., which took place in St. Paul's Cathedral, with the Rev. William J. McMullen officiating, assisted by the Rev. Eugene Gerlach, of North Star, O.

The bride wore an Elizabethan gown of white satin with a yoke and high standing collar of duchess lace, and a side panel of tulle and lace draped one side. Her veil was of duchess lace arranged in cap effect, with sprays of orange blossoms, and it fell over a full court train of the satin. She carried calla lilies and white lilacs.

Her sister, Mrs. Philip G. Wagner, of Sidney, was matron of honor, appearing in peach chiffon with a flounced, circular skirt, and with it she wore a cocktail jacket of peach chiffon and gold sequins. Her hat matched her frock and she carried spring flowers. Another sister, Ruth M. Haverty, as the maid of honor, wore a similarly made dress in turquoise blue chiffon and sequins, with hat to match.

The other girls in the bridal party wore chiffon frocks in the pastel shades with cocktail jackets and hats to match, and they all carried spring flowers. These bridesmaids included Betty Page, Ruth Hopkins, Dorothy Bugher, of Pittsburgh; Miriam Thedieck, of Sidney, and Mrs. James Cannon, of Oakmont. The small flower girl was Blanche Wagner, niece of the bride and also of the bridegroom, since the two Haverty girls married brothers. Blanche wore a frock of ruffled pink tulle and she carried a small colonial bouquet.

Philip G. Wagner, of Sidney, was his brother's best man and the ushers included John M. Haverty, Jr., Jerome Wagner, Carl Wenstrup, of Cincinnati; Lawrence Sinnott and Walter Farrar, of Cleveland, and Eugene Busch, of Waterbury, Conn.

A breakfast in the Haverty home followed the ceremony, with the bridal party and close friends as guests. Mr. and Mrs. Wagner sail on Thursday for a Mediterranean cruise, and after May 1 will be at home in Sidney.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM McCURDY STEVENSON, of Denniston avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rachel Stevenson, to David K. P. Bair, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. George E. Bair, of Edgewood.

MRS. LOUISE M. BEALOR, of Westwood, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Nancy Louise Bealor, and William Houston Knox, of this city, which was solemnized Saturday afternoon by the Rev. R. L. Biddle. The bride wore beige georgette with a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley, while her maid of honor, Miss Catherine E. Walker, of Wilkinsburg, appeared in orchid georgette with a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley. Paul Clark was best man. A small reception and dinner for the families followed the ceremony. Mr. Knox is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, where he was president of the Pi Rho Delta fraternity.

"THE WORKING METHODS OF THE SCIENTIST" and how they lead to the development of industries were most interestingly explained to the Twentieth Century Club yesterday by Dr. E. R. Weidlein, director of Mellon Institute. Scientists must have creative imagination and vision plus a sense of humor, Dr. Weidlein stated, adding that the price of progress today in all lines depends upon research. Much has already been accomplished towards smoke abatement, the speaker declared, saying the problem is one of working with the equipment already installed in homes and with the fuel already in use. Scientific research is revolutionizing industry, Dr. Weidlein went on, showing how research in one field frequently opens up an entirely new industry.

MORE than 100 members and guests of the East Liberty Woman's Club attended the "love feast" and reception for new members which was held yesterday in the Food Craft Shop. The occasion was called a "love feast," because as part of the program tribute was paid to the services of the various committee chairmen. Music for the afternoon consisted of old fashioned songs in costume, and were furnished by Lillian Blanc, soprano; Edgar Zellman, bass, with Dora S. Nepereny as accompanist.

THE ROAD OF TRAVEL LUXURY

ITTSBURGHERS LAUD HEARST CONTEST

of it were everywhere erected, in which all the earthly goods of their owners were invested.

"Wagons drew it from town to town; boats bore it from clime to clime, and the winds wafted it from nation to nation. . . . Universal public opinion not only tolerated but recognized and adopted its use.

"It is true that even then it was known and acknowledged that many were greatly injured by it, but none seemed to think that the injury arose from the use of a bad thing, but from the abuse of a very good thing. The victims of it were to be pitied and compassionated, just as are the heirs of consumption and other hereditary diseases.

"Their failing was treated as a misfortune, and not as a crime, or even as a disgrace. If then what I have been saying is true, is it wonderful that some should think and act now as all thought and acted 20 years ago? And is it just to assail, condemn, or despise them for doing so?

"The universal sense of mankind on any subject is an argument, or at least an influence, not easily overcome. The success of the argument in favor of the existence of an over-ruling providence mainly depends upon that sense."

Founders and Fanatics

Franklin H. Heald, of Fontana, al., philosopher of the Society of Friends, is one of those to quote he immortal emancipator for appropriate public use on Lincoln's irthday in connection with the ffer of William Randolph Hearst f a $25,000 prize for the best legally vorkable and sensible substitute for rohibition. Mr. Heald adds:

"I was glad to see the purposes and rules of Mr. Hearst's contest. I hope and believe that this effort of a constructive publisher will be the means of saving the country from the curse of prohibition.

"Lincoln was right 87 years ago, at the very start of the fanatic movement. I also believe our new president will back such a movement, i' we back him up with our petitions.

"Mr. Hoover and I were members of the same Society of Friends (Quakers) at West Branch, Ia. In fact, we are cousins by marriage, and we both thoroughly understand that prohibition is a crime against good citizenship, as Mr. Hearst says, and as he said at the time prohibition became a theoretical law.

"Nearly all people who are informed understand that our good old Quaker 'uncles,' such as Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, William Penn, Thomas Paine, Stephen Girard and others, helped found this nation in the 'spirit of friendship' regardless of religious hatreds and fanaticisms.

"Peace, temperance in all things and quiet are the especial hobbies of good Quakers, and Mr. Hoover knows that all the attempts at prohibition in the history of the world have resulted in debauchery. The very best which can be attained is the temperance of our good old grandmothers and aunts in their homes.

"I should like to see millions of Americans, who understand what temperance means as well as they know what prohibition has brought the nation, write their prayers and pet'tions to President-elect Hoover and to their representatives and senators in the Congress and force a showdown vote.

"We thus can rout these dangerous fanatics who would ruin the country by their innocent stupidity. If such a campaign to bring our government servants to their senses requires financing, I will try to aid and will be a leader in subscribing $5,000 to save the greatest nation of known history.

"Everlasting credit to Mr. Hearst, to Mr. Hoover and to the Quaker doctrine of temperance in all things."

The Heald views from Southern California are re-echoed from all parts of the nation as the temperance prize contest continues to gather momentum and size like a giant snowball rolling downhill. Subjoined are further interviews on the contest gathered by Hearst newspaper correspondents:

Charles B. Prichard

Charles B. Prichard, lawyer, and former Director of Public Safety of Pittsburgh.

"Mr. Hearst's offer of a prize of $25,000 for the best practicable plan as a substitute for the present prohibition system, to produce temperance, may do much to concentrate thought on this vexatious question. The offer is attractive enough to win the attenton of the best minds of the country.

C. B. Prichard.

"Certainly prohibition has been far from successful, and I doubt if it is possible under existing laws and methods of enforcement to stop the manufacture and sale of liquor and prevent drunkenness. Some other method of promoting temperance may be more successful, and if the thoughtful people of the United States, spurred by Mr. Hearst's offer, evolve some practical plan as a substitute, he will have earned the gratitude of the nation."

John Ray Ewers

The Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, minister, East End Christian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.:

"The Hearst temperance prize contest is a wholesome undertakink. Let us have light. People who possess open minds will be glad to see this contest develop wide and deep interest.

John Ray Ewers.

"We do not want drunken cab drivers, drunken engineers or drunken workmen. Half the automobile accidents are caused by liquor; we can do without this mixing of whisky and gasoline. A speaker at banquets all over the United States tells me that it is astounding the way girls drink at such functions.

"The world is watching the American experiment with prohibition. If any man has brains enough to invent a better plan than prohibition let him set it forth. A careful analysis of the recent election would seem to lead any honest man to the conviction that there are thousands upon thousands of people in this country who are not satisfied with our temperance legislation.

"Let the contest go on; let us get all the truth we can upon this subject, for not only America but the entire world is struggling earnestly with this problem of the use and abuse of liquors."

Rules of $25,000 Temperance Contest

THE purpose of the contest is to obtain a practicable plan, as a substittue for prohibition, which will secure better actual temperance conditions, which will be more easily possible of enforcement by state and federal authorities, which will offer less encouragement to crime and tend less to debauch the public service, and which will not so outrage and violate the fundamental rights and personal liberties of American citizens.

The rules and conditions of the contest are simple and are as follows:

1—Every person is entitled to enter the contest, but no one person may submit more than one plan.

2—The practicable plan proposed as a substitute for prohibition must be set forth in an article containing not more than 1,000 words.

3—This contest will close on April 30, 1929, and no plan which has not been mailed and postmarked on or before that date will be considered.

4—The articles submitted to the contest will be judged by a committee of eminent Americans, the personnel of the committee to be announced at a later date.

5—The full prize of $25,000 will be awarded to the contestant submitting the best plan as a practical temperance substitute for prohibition.

6—If other plans not awarded the first prize shall still be considered worthy of some compensation by the committee, a second prize of $5,000 and other prizes of $1,000 each may be awarded.

7—Articles submitting a plan to be considered in this contest may be sent to the temperance contest committee, care of the editor of any one of the following Hearst newspapers: Albany Times-Union, Atlanta Georgian, Baltimore News, Boston Evening American, Chicago Herald and Examiner, Detroit Times, Los Angeles Examiner, New York American, Omaha Bee-News, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Rochester Journal, San Antonio Light, San Francisco Examiner, Syracuse Journal, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Washington Herald, Wisconsin News (Milwaukee).

PROBE OF CELL DEATH AGAIN URGED

Fred R. Kleibacker, 803 Publication Building, again has written to Council to criticize police for the death January 1 of Charles Donameyer while a prisoner in Central Police Station.

Responding to one of the writer's previous letters, Council asked Safety Director for a report and was advised that the prisoner was picked up as a case for the welfare department but died in a cell during the night.

Kleibacker has hinted at brutal treatment and in his latest letter volunteers to appear at a public hearing before Council. He said he had an eye-witness to Donameyer's "collapse" who was willing to testify.

The writer referred to other cases in which the "rights of citizens were grossly violated and the humanities entirely disregarded."

Double Track Permit In 6th Avenue Asked

The Pittsburgh Railways Company has applied to Council for permission to lay double tracks on Sixth avenue, between Forbes street and Diamond street. The area was owned by the company until its sale to the city for $7,000.

The ordinance containing the application was accompanied by letters from Charles A. Finley and former Mayor William A. Magee, chairman and attorney, respectively, of the Traction Conference Board. Both letters approved the application but called attention to the fact that the ordinance omitted any term of years.

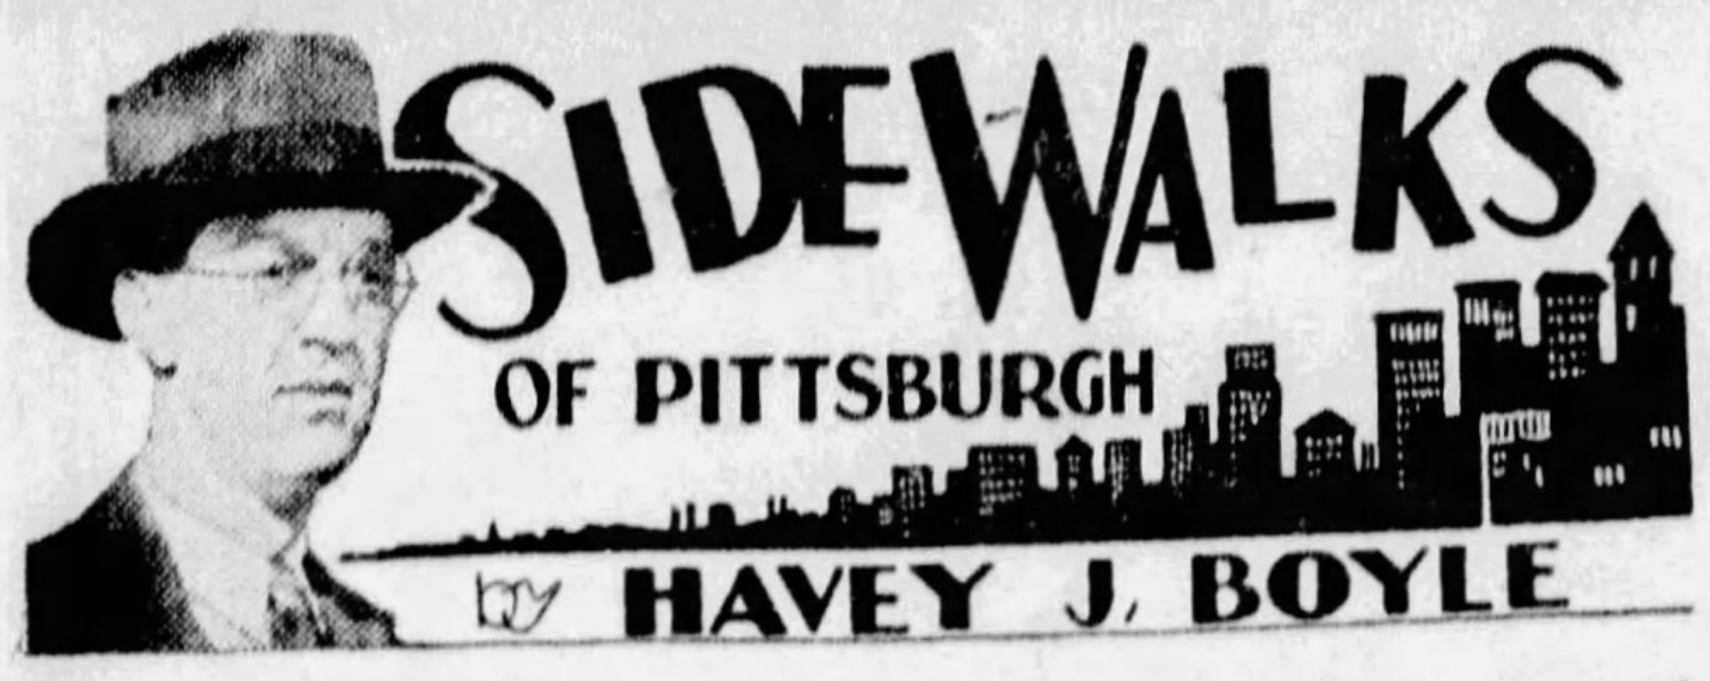
GANG HEAD SUSPECT INDICTMENT ASKED



SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

I FIGURED that the note from Spy No. 469 should be turned over to the etiquet editor as it began with the statement that Spy No. 469 observed a man in William Penn way pecking at his teeth with a toothpick, but a little later in the report the spy makes himself clear when he says he was amazed that the man thus violating the code might have been acting. As the spy passed him the man with the toothpick stopped long enough to ask: "Could you let me have a nickel for a bowl of soup?" This probably was an error. The stranger probably wanted a nickel for dessert.

Charles Doyle, the scrivener, has just returned from a point, 100 miles northwest of Montreal. He was there for his annual winter recreation, a sport known as skiing. Leaving Pittsburgh in the wintertime to go to Canada is a little suggestive of hauling coal to New Castle or throwing apples into an orchard, but Mr. Doyle reports a great time was had. With

Mr. Doyle was another fortunate member of the Fourth Estate, Joseph Huhn, who comes back with imprints of skiis, bob-sleds and foot-prints all over him. Among the trophies brought back by Mr. Doyle was a wine list of some dimensions and setting forth what will seem to the average American as reasonable prices.

A SECOND-HAND book store in the downtown section attracts a varied group of clients. Here the rich and the poor meet on common ground. Wealthy people with a flair for first editions dig around the shelves, while poorer clients, desirous of getting good books at a low cost, spend hours rummaging through the vast collection. Sellers as well as purchasers visit the store with an idea of cleaning out a library at home that has grown too large or adding to one that cannot be supported in the customary style. It is a place where the shopper can take his time and go away without making a purchase without getting a frown from the people in charge. Here college men and laboring men of a studious turn of mind meet in a common quest for knowledge and entertainment.

One of the most talked about young gentlemen of the town is a youth named Teddy Joyce. He is master of ceremonies at the Penn Theater. He is especially popular with the young ladies who follow the movie stars as young boys used to follow the doings of the big baseball stars. Mr. Joyce's entrance is the signal for a rousing demonstration that recalls political meetings when there were marching clubs, torchlight parades, and bonfires.

The size of Mr. Joyce's shoes and the size collar he wears are common knowledge among his public. His fan mail has made the poor lettercarrier on his route suggest Lon Chaney in a conventional pose. In the mail there are innumerable offers of marriage and words conveying in a definite way undying devotion to him and to his art. Mr. Joyce steps in to fill a void which occurred when the stock companies of long ago went out of existence. The maidens who sighed and giggled over the handsome "lead" in the stock now say: "Let Joyce be unconfined."

I'VE SENT HIM 4 LETTERS AND HAVEN'T RECEIVED AN ANSWER!
DON'T BE DISCOURAGED I'VE SENT HIM 10!

FISH CLUB MAN TELLS OF RUM BUYING

Roy F. Deutsch, steward of the Union Fishing Club, told a jury in Federal Court today that he had bought liquor from four bootleggers for the club, and named the bootleggers. They were, he said, M. Allshouse, a man named "Wheeler," and man named "Prezechlasa" and "Parchman's man."

The club steward identified eight checks ranging from amounts of $336 to $770, which, he testified, had been made out to him by A. E. Gill, club secretary, for purchase of booze. Payments were made by check, he said, until last November 15, when "the bootleggers wouldn't take checks any more." That was just after the county grand jury investigation opened.

MOVE BOOZE SUPPLY

In that same week the liquor supply was removed from the clubhouse, Deutsch testified, but it was restored for the Christmas holidays. It was the holiday liquor dry agents found in the clubhouse when they raided it January 8, Deutsch said.

He declared the liquor had been removed at the behest of Dr. F. H. Fredericks, chairman of the board of directors, and a defendant in the case. Deutsch could not tell where it had been taken, but said it had been brought back by John Coney, assistant steward.

ALLSHOUSE FINED

Allshouse arrived five minutes late, delaying the court, and Judge Nelson McVicar fined him $10. Allshouse blamed the delay on the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

The defendants on trial are W. H. Roberston, city assessor, president of the club; Dr. F. H. Frederick, chairman of the board of directors; A. E. Gill, secretary; W. L. Trimble, A. C. Walter, William Bader, and John F. Soutter, members of the board of directors; Joseph P. Hilldorfer, former president; John Coney, assistant steward; Frank G. Peters, waiter; Valentine Prezechlasa, M. Allshouse, William A. Parchman and Charles W. Bott.

Delegations of Welshmen from communities within a 50-mile radius have signified their intention to attend. The Oakland Choral Society of 30 voices, directed by Samuel Jones, will present a program of Welsh music, and, in addition, the banqueters will sing native hymns and folk songs.

Fred W. Jones is chairman of the banquet committee.

TWO CHIEFS JOIN IN REQUEST

Police Chiefs John W. Morris and Michael Pipko, of Swissvale and Braddock, respectively, will confer today with District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner to determine whether they can have Tony Dell, alleged head of a gang of whisky thieves, indicted in this term of court.

The chiefs are anxious to have Dell, who escaped from Rankin police station last week, indicted so he will have to stand trial when—and if—he is caught again. If he is not indicted now, Morris said, the statute of limitations may have run before he is captured.

Ray Danner, 38, of Bates street, and Herman Molden, 42, of Coltart street, arrested with Dell while the three allegedly were trying to force their way into Allen's drug store, Noble street, Swissvale, have been held for court on eight charges of breaking and entering.

Benjamin Hershberger, 45, pool room proprietor, of Wylie avenue, arrested Saturday by Chief Pipko, was held on charges of receiving stolen goods. Police alledged he bought whisky the gang had stolen.

Joseph Engelsberg, Hill political czar, entered the case when he posted bail for Hershberger. Danner and Molden are held in jail, pending court trial, in default of $8,000 bail each.

Morris said Dell was the "brains of the gang." Unless Dell was recaptured, he said he believed the workings of the ring that preyed upon Swissvale, Braddock, Rankin, Wilkinsburg and Homewood druggists, would never be revealed.

Lane is alleged to have asked Gorsock to help him hold up a chain grocery store in Beaver avenue, but Gorsock refused, detectives say. Lane admitted robbing Gorsock, police declared.

Will Rogers Says

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.

That Hoover is a mighty human guy at that. Just today he went away out of his way to encourage some old fellow 82 years old, that had been working for years on some sort of scheme he wanted to get patented, and didn't know how.

It was to make synthetic rubber boots out of nothing, but just soil and oxygen from a real estate sales talk. With Hoover's influence, chances are he will get t patented. (Shows you what a pull will do in this country.)

And Hoover wears rubber boots in fishing. Seems Henry Ford and Firestone dug this old crank up somewhere. They wear rubber boots, too.

Yours, WILL.

SUN-TELEGRAPH EDITORIAL GOES TO ENGLAND AND BACK

An expression of sympathy for the condition of King George, published in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph while the royal Englishman was dangerously ill, found its way into Portsmouth Evening News, an English paper, it was revealed yesterday by E. S. March, of South Braddock avenue, Edgewood.

The comment, included in a Sun-Telegraph editorial was found in an issue of the paper sent to relatives by Marsh, and reprinted as "An American Tribute." The editorial explained that the king's illness was caused chiefly by his attention to his kingly duties.

The relatives, in turn, sent to Marsh the clipping from the Portsmouth paper, which lauded the Sun-Telegraph editorial as a true depiction of England's attitude toward and appreciation of its monarch.

SORE THROAT!

Gargle with Listerine

Kills germs in 15 seconds

DON'T let a sore throat get serious. It's a germ condition that ought to be whipped early.

At the first sign of trouble, gargle with full strength Listerine. Your improvement ought to be rapid. If it is not, consult your doctor.

Listerine, full strength, is effective against infections because it is powerful against germs. It kills even the virulent B. Typhosus (typhoid) germ in 15 seconds, as shown by repeated tests in three great laboratories.

We have a helpful free book, Personal Hygiene, that is yours for the asking. Write Dept. S. 89, Lambert Pharmacal Company, 2101 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

And for COLDS

Countless colds start when germs are carried to the mouth on food. By using Listerine on the hands before every meal, you attack such germs and lessen the risk of cold. Remember this, mothers, when handling baby's food.

REMEMBER WHEN—?

Remember when the whole town was scandalized by the announcement that "The Black Crook" would play at the Grand Opera House?

Remember when you vainly tried to listen to Walter Damrosch's orchestra while the people in the seat beside you in old Exposition Hall crunched popcorn?

Remember when in those cold February days you kept your feet warm by burying them in the deep straw that littered the floor of the Temperanceville horse car?

MANY MEN HAVE CONSTANT COUGH

Caused by Catarrhal, Asthma or Bronchial Trouble and Smoking.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDY SOON STOPS THE COUGH

Some men can smoke constantly and never cough, but let them catch a deep-seated cold and get a touch of Catarrhal, Bronchial or asthmatic trouble in their throat, Bronchial tubes or lungs and they are bound to have an awful cough. Their system has difficulty throwing it off, and in time they weaken and are apt to fall easy victim to respiratory lung diseases, pneumonia, fever or grippe.

NEED REAL REMEDY

Such coughs in themselves aren't dangerous or alarming, and any man may easily rid himself of such troubles and at the same time fortify, strengthen and build up his system so nature will be impervious to future attacks. It merely depends on how long it has clung to him how long it will take to throw it off.

A couple large bottles of Lin-O-Nine, a nice tasting, creamy white mixture of Flaxseed Oil, Cassia, Eucalyptus, Betula, Irish Moss and Glycerine does the trick. It is nice to take, soothes the membrane lining almost instantly; checks the cough and rapidly assists nature in the work of throwing off the catarrhal, bronchial or asthmatic symptoms.

Lin-O-Nine is more thorough and faster working than nasty, nauseating Cod Liver Oil, which is about the only other real remedy for such troubles.

Lin-O-Nine is made of finest ingredients and guaranteed by the long established, nationally known Kerr Chemical Corp. Doctors, specialists and thousands of users endorse it. Local druggists are featuring Lin-O-Nine. At this time of year grave dangers lurk in coughs and colds. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00.

SIMPLE HOME MIXTURE DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Cincinnati Barber Tells How Any One Can Prepare It in 5 Minutes

Any man or woman can easily look twenty years younger by simply darkening their gray, faded, or streaky hair. This is now easy to accomplish with a recipe given by a well known Cincinnati barber.

Simply take a half-pint of water, add one ounce of bay rum, ¼ ounce of glycerine and a small box of Barbo Compound. Shake and it is ready to use. These ingredients can be bought at drug stores at trifling cost.

Applied to the hair twice weekly this delightful mixture quickly gives the desired shade. It is easy to use, is not sticky or greasy, will not color the scalp and does not rub off.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel, made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

WAS HELPED IN MARVELOUS WAY

Local Lady's Health Troubles Ended By New Natural Medicine, Ten Herbs.

The remarkable success of Ten Herbs, the new natural medicine, is due to its amazing power often to give complete relief after many other medicines have failed. Every sufferer from stomach, liver, kidney or bowel trouble should not fail to give this celebrated compound a trial. A great mass of evidence on file—including signed statements of many men and women of this section—is your guarantee that it is a medicine of surprising merit.

MRS. ANNA RICHIE

"I believe that if suffering people will try Ten Herbs they will get results far beyond their expectations," was the recent statement of Mrs. Anna Richie, 462 Taylor Street, East End, Pittsburgh. "I know that it was marvelous what Ten Herbs did for me," Mrs. Richie continued. "I was so weak and rundown I could not do my housework. My nerves were so bad I was unable to sleep right, and any little noise would bother me. I had sieges of nervous headaches and there were rheumatic pains in my back, shoulders and arms. I had to arise several times at night. Besides all this, I was troubled with indigestion so badly that food would nauseate me and cause vomiting. I would fill with gas, and have terrible heartburn. My tongue was coated. I was very bilious, and had sallow complexion.

"Ten Herbs made me feel like a new woman. I have more strength and ambition—can now do my housework. I eat my meals with a relish, and no longer become nauseated—no more gas, heartburn, or coated tongue. Rheumatism is gone, and night rising has been stopped. My nerves are so quiet that I can sleep the whole night through. My complexion has cleared, and I am free of those terrible headaches. Even friends remark about the change that has come over me. I certainly am thankful to Ten Herbs for all it has done for me. I gladly recommend this medicine to the public."

Ten Herbs is being introduced at May's Main Store, Fifth Avenue and Liberty Street, Pittsburgh, and sold at all May's Drug Stores.

PNEUMONIA IN THE PROLOGUE LEADS TO A RACY FARCE IN "THE OTHER MAN"

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

GEORGE SEIBEL

PNEUMONIA isn't the customary opening for a farce, but it's not impossible, as was shown last night by Vincent Lawrence in a play called "The Other Man." Oxygen and strychnine in the prologue do not keep the heroine from becoming a widow. Then three acts more are required to get her to kiss the doctor, though she marries him in the first of these three acts. All of which shows that Vincent Lawrence is working with refractory material, but it amused the audience in the Nixon Theater hugely, and the widow, charmingly played by Edna Hibbard, seemed to like it too.

That prologue strikes a funeral note, and even at the close there's a memorial wreath which furnishes a lot of fun as the doctor rolls it like a hoop. Perhaps Mr. Lawrence wanted us to be in at the death in order to make us believe in the charming widow, dimpled and demure, of the other acts. At any rate, the little opening scene is admirably acted, and William Boyd as the doctor exhibits a fine professional manner that accounts for his high standing when the curtain rises again two and a half years later.

Then the widow calls to make her first payment for the medical services rendered in the prologue. Before she leaves the doctor's office, she is married to him. Hard to believe, but the audience saw how it was done. Neither license nor witnesses seemed to be necessary.

It was a bit thoughtless, however, to leave the bride-to-be parked on a sofa while the bridegroom went to bring the parson. She was at once subjected to annoyances by the "other man," which might have been avoided if the doctor had thought of calling the preacher on the phone.

BOOT-WORK NEEDED

That scene also makes it hard to understand why the "other man" hasn't been kicked out of the place long before the widow came into it. He is played so naturally by Pat O'Brien that the audience ought to feel quite ready to kick him out since the doctor is remiss in doing it.

Obviously there are things in this comedy that are a bit of a strain on human credulity. The doctor has not only become a great surgeon, but also a great financier and a pugilistic fan. And Edna Hibbard in widow's weeds was his lone inspiration. High romance, so far—a world in which anything can happen. We see the doctor returning from his afternoon visitations clad in immaculate tuxedo, and when his wife is ready to leave him she wears all his pearls and diamond bracelets to go out into the cold world where she was so poor. Which makes us rather suspect that she had no serious intention of going.

And furthermore we suspect that the "other man" has not been kicked out because there wouldn't be any play if he did not kiss the unkissed wife. Do not inquire too closely into these points of ethics and technique. With such a charming widow as Edna Hibbard all things are possible. And such an amusing playwright as Vincent Lawrence even makes them highly credible. We are ready to accept William Boyd as a great surgeon, even though his knowledge of feminine psychology stops short at widows. We are even ready to acclaim him as a Wall Street bull and as a ringside rounder.

IT'S BEEN DONE BEFORE

Since a hunchbacked gentleman by the name of Richard wooed Lady Anne, there hasn't been such high-handed love-making displayed on any stage. It seemed to amuse even the charming widow, who becomes arbiter of the final debate. She has been devoted to her first husband, grateful to the doctor, frigid to the "other man," and finally she is delightfully apt in administering poetic justice. Only it wasn't quite fair to tell Pat O'Brien to "shut up," when he tried to get into the debate. She might have listened politely—but widows are as incomprehensible as Einstein's demonstration of the income tax.

Deliciously inconsequential, light as gossamer, bristling with clever lines, and admirably played—even such minor characters as the doctor's lady patient by Jennette Miller and the stodgy butler by Harry Stafford. "The Other Man" ought to win its way. It shows what a real humorist can extract from pneumonia. It also illustrates the peculiar advantages enjoyed by the medical profession in courtship, though they almost spoil them by their injudicious choice of friends.

Grand Offers Bancroft Film

"The Wolf of Wall Street," which was seen in the Stanley several weeks ago, is now being presented in the Grand. The production is an all-talkie and it stars George Bancroft. Bancroft plays a bullying but shrewd Wall street broker, a man without fear or conscience, driving over every obstacle and even welcoming ruin when it proves the only way to defeat his enemy. A faithless wife, played by Baclanova, figures prominently in the story. Nancy Carroll and Paul Lukas are in the cast. Short sound screen entertainment is on the bill.

Joseph Lhevinne Gives Recital Tonight

Joseph Lhevinne, Russian pianist, will give the fifth Art Society concert in Carnegie Music Hall tonight. His program will open with Brahms' Intermezzo in E Flat Major, the Intermezzo in A Flat Major, Op. 76, and Capriccio in C Sharp Minor, Op. 76. He also will play the Schumann Etudes Symphoniques, a group of Chopin numbers, Debussy's "La Terrace des Audiences du Claire de Lune" and Feux d'Artifice. The program will close by Gypsy Airs by Tausig.

MELODY AND MISS FOX IN ALVIN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Rose-Marie," one of the most popular of all musical plays, is back with us again. It is the Alvin's current presentation.

So much has been said about this production in the past, that little need be said here. The voices of the Canadian Red Coats sound as lusty as ever. Hardboiled Herman still threatens to use his trusty "Genevieve." The bad Indian, Black Eagle, is murdered with as slim a knife thrust as ever felled him in performances past. And the Totem Tom Tom dance and song and the "Indian Love Call" continue their appeal.

What impressed us most last night was that the company, after hundreds and then some performances, retains its enthusiasm. It went through the routine of the romance, the man hunt and the songs and dance as if it were a premiere.

BROWN EYED HEROINE

No, there isn't much new to tell about "Rose Marie." We might note, though, that the present cast is all very satisfactory. Virginia Fox, with eyes sparkling and brown, makes an appealing study in the title role. And she has a voice that pleases.

Some of the faces of the other principals are as familiar as the the characters they portray. The vibrant personality of Charles Meakins again is seen as Sergt. Malone. Houston Richards does his usual comic Hardboiled Herman. Paul Donah is his old romantic, singing self as the heroic Jim Kenyon.

The cast also includes Peggy Pates, Russell Griswold, Ross Gibson, Sano Marco, Mira Nirska and Daisy Gibson.

A PARTING TOAST

Well, here's to "Rose-Marie" . . . a safe and alluring beacon light in these turbulent days of the modern theater. We might tire of Hardboiled Herman and become shocked at his extravagance in tossing away a sack of Bull Durham at every performance. We might become bored with the continual murder of Black Eagle. But we'll always enjoy the music . . . the melody will linger on.

Vilma Banky Regent Star

Vilma Banky's first starring production, "The Awakening," is the current sound film in the Regent. It has a theme song "Marie," written by Irving Berlin. Peasant tunes and Uhlan marching songs also are introduced. In the film there are two men who would like to have Vilma. One is a ruthless peasant, played by Louis Wolheim, and the other is a young German cavalry officer, played by Walter Byron. Short Vitaphone features and news pictures are on the bill.

Vilma Banky

Mexicans Top Sheridan Bill

Mexico City's motorcycle police troop are the high spot in the vaudeville in the Sheridan Square the first three days of this week. The Mexicans do speed and fancy riding on their motorcycles. Chic Sales, in "Marching On," is a screen specialty, with Chic in a timely Lincoln birthday feature. The photoplay is "Captain Lash," a talkie starring Victor McLaglen. Claire Windsor plays the feminine lead. The stage vaudeville also features Arthur Devoy, who chatters on timely topics; Dare and Fay and McCormick and Irving in "Hi Hat Hokum." Fox Movietone News completes the bill.

Boxes have been reserved in the Sheridan Square tonight for G. A. R. veterans and also "vets" of the World War, invited by the Harris Amusement Company to see and hear "Marching On."

Son to Rest Near Kit Carson's Grave

TAOS, N. M., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Kit Carson, Jr., son of the famous scout and frontiersman, will be buried here Friday beside his father. He died at La Junta, Col., Saturday at the age of 79. A widow, two sons and five daughters survive him.

Kit Carson, Sr., who died in 1868, settled in Taos in 1854 after being appointed Indian agent here.

MAKE-BELIEVE WORLD -:- SENDS -:- FRIENDLY AMBASSADORS

Edna Hibbard, leading woman of "The Other Man," comedy in the Nixon.

Mira Nirska is dancer and dramatic actress in "Rose Marie," operetta in the Alvin.

Irene Franklin, character song artist, is featured in the Davis vaudeville.

One of the group of Duncan Dancers from Russia now appearing in the Pitt.

John Boles is the leading man of "The Last Warning," Stanley mystery film.

Anita Page is seen with Ramon Novarro in "The Flying Fleet," on Penn Screen.

'SHADY LADY' IS HARRIS FILM

"The Shady Lady" casts her shadow over the Harris screen the first three days of this week. The lady is none other than Phyllis Haver, who plays the title role in a picture of that name. The production is offered with sound and some dialogue. You hear the voice of Louis Wolheim, who figures prominently as a bullying gun-runner in the piece. And though the voice registers all right, you'd think a great big fellow like Louis would have a stronger voice than that which registers. You hear some other voices, too, including that of Miss Haver, which sounds pleasantly. The locale is Havana. There's some mystery about the identity of Phyllis—it seems she has committed murder or something. But, at the end, you find she isn't such a bad woman after all—not nearly as bad as she has been in some other pictures. The production is all quite entertaining and it closes with a rather well done talk episode that makes you smile and leaves you happy. Robert Armstrong is in the cast.

Phyllis Haver.

An interesting and timely sound screen specialty is "Marching On," featuring Chic Sales. It has to do with an old soldier, who knew Lincoln.

ACTS ON STAGE

Joe Howard, writer of musical plays, tops the stage vaudeville. Howard is an entertainer of the old school. His act serves to reintroduce some of his old song hits.

Don Austin, cartoonist, who put Sidney Smith's Andy Gump into the movies, is another feature. Among other things, he draws some portraits of well-known movie stars. A partner, Marie, does a song or two. The Alexander Santos Revue offers song, dance and comedy. Harrison and Dakin amuse in a comedy skit. Additional attractions also are on the bill.

RAMON FLIES HIGH IN PENN

Ramon Novarro, handsome and daring, soars high and far on the Penn screen this week in "The Flying Fleet," a picture that has to do with aviators, the Navy and trans-ocean flights. And, as was expected, Ramon is as much at home in the cockpit of an airplane as ever he was in the chariot of "Ben Hur," or in the royal carriage of "The Student Prince."

The picture has thrills, excitement and love interest. The story chiefly concerns two youthful aviators, friends from early training days, and a girl. Their love for the girl, for a time, threatens their friendship. But things turn out rather well at the end, after a near-disastrous attempt to fly to Honolulu, and a heroic gesture on the part of Ramon. But he well can take the risks that heroism entails for the movie script insured him the girl at the final fadeout. And that means a lot—when you learn the girl is Anita Page. Incidentally, Anita hasn't so very much to do in the picture. But what she does, she does rather well.

AIRPLANES NUMEROUS

The production has sound effects. You can hear the whirl of wings and motors and that sort of thing. Scores of planes maneuver through the air. There is some comedy, the title writer having made Ralph Graves, the other boy friend, say some humorous things. Ralph is a pretty good actor. However, you'd hardly recognize him in several sequence with the beard that sprouts over his face. But then that's more movie realism for you—for there are no barber shops in the middle of the Pacific.

Teddy Joyce is prominent on the stage in "Beauty Shop Revue," which has six scenes and the usually associated music, song and dance. Teddy introduces a new band number, written by himself. Other entertainers include Helen Lynd, the Gibson Sisters and Karavieff. Short features are on the bill.

TOTO ON TOP IN DAVIS BILL

Between a couple of dancers who open the program and a couple of trick roller skaters who close it, the Davis again has a bill of all-vaudeville that would be hard to match for speed and merit. Honors are about even between Irene Franklin and Toto the Clown.

This Toto is a great genius in his line—the Edison of clowns and a circus by himself. When he falls on his dog, when he plays the violin with one horsehair, when he marches off with the giant bride, when he produces his own cigaret lighter, when he imitates first the mechanical doll and then Mae Murray in "The Merry Widow," he has his audience in a roar; but few of the people whom he amuses give a thought to the originality and artistry of his new inventions, which follow one another so swiftly and so smoothly.

Yes, Toto is a great genius. But Irene Franklin was his close rival in the appreciation of the audience. Her new songs—"Be Your Age," "Chester the Cowboy of Liggett's," and "The Fireman's Jealous Wife"—are among the best she has ever sung, and she has that rare talent for mimicry and humorous effect.

Next to these two there is Jack Osterman, with high-voltage sentimental ballads and amusing monologue that slips in a few raw ones. And there's Florrie Le Vere with Lou Handman, whose theater box scene is as funny as ever. And there's Jack Clifford as the rube sheriff, also as funny as ever.

Baseball fans could view Jess Petty and Al Mamaux—Jess smiles while Al sings—they have some pleasant banter besides. Musical fans could hear Galla Rini and his sister play almost every instrument in the brass band, after an initial medley on accordeons. It is a good bill from start to finish, but the two bright stars in it are Irene and Toto.

Enright Film Is Impressive

The picture cameras seemingly have caught some elusive qualities from life and a keen directorial hand has woven them into an impressive pattern in "The Shopworn Angel," current in the Enright. It is rather an exceptional photoplay — this story of a lonesome, bashful soldier and a gay, giddy show girl. Nancy Carroll and Gary Cooper do sincere and worthy work as the principal characters. It is the Gary Cooper of the Cadet White episode in "Wings." An altogether pathetic Gary—one who realizes that Old Man Death is waiting somewhere just around the corner. And the portrayal isn't such a far cry from real life. For there were soldier boys like that—boys who carried the look that told they wouldn't come parading back.

Nancy Carroll

ACTION ON BROADWAY

Don't get the idea "The Shopworn Angel" is a war picture in the usual sense of the word; for it is not. Most of its action takes place in Broadway and Coney Island, with some brief army camp sequences.

The photoplay is a good one—well worthy to break the old movie tradition that handsome young heroes must live, love and be happy if the bell is to ring at the box office.

A stage revue that entertains is an added feature. It is "Dance Parade" and offers comedy, dance and song. There also is an Abraham Lincoln memorial film, which includes a recitation of "The Gettysburg Address."

MUSIC'S BEAUTY AND IMAGERY INTERPRETED BY DUNCAN DANCERS IN PITT

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

TERPSICHORE, typified in slow and graceful movements, symbolizing the imagery and beauty of music that is visible to those with interpretive eyes, is personified by the Isadora Duncan dancers, who opened an engagement of a week in the Pitt last night. This group, from the school in Moscow founded by the late Isadora Duncan, is composed of a dozen young women, headed by Irma Duncan, principal dancer, and their exhibition last night was a stately pageant of choreography of rather solemn atmosphere, even though there were representations of lightness and gayety in the interpretations of some of the compositions, such as waltzes, mazurkas, etc., of Schubert and Chopin. The first half of the program was given as dances of this nature, very prettily executed.

The second part presented the drama as a vehicle of the dance, styled impressions of revolutionary Russia. It included "Warshavianka," Russia in revolution, with song; a triology, representing laborers at their task, their capitulation to Famine and finally their triumph and resumption of their work, as well as a number of other figures interpreting industrial and folk themes.

One must not go to this exposition of the art of dancing to see anything like fandangoes, buck and wing or even the difficult toe dance. While the artists are Russian there is no dancing of the wild and whirling kind that we associate with Russia nor the squatty leg-twisting that is supposed to be Russian. There is not even any of the kind of dancing that Pavlova gave us, dainty and poetic, nor the kind we associate with the name of Mikhail Mordkin.

In fact, it is a type of dancing that probably originated in this country, as presented by the Marion Morgan dancers, and others, as far as the basic idea is concerned. It is very well done, however, and those who can be entertained for an evening by art of this kind will be well repaid by a visit to the Pitt.

Piano accompaniment for the dances is artistically played by Maurice Sheyne.

"Jazz Revue" Academy Show

"Jazztime Revue," burlesque in the Academy, features Kitty Madison as the feminine star. Her delineation of "Vampires of the Past and Present" is one of the show's specialties. Harry Evanson, featured funster, portrays a boob comedy role. Snookie Woods, Curls Mason and Marie Tomlinson again are appearing in specialties on the runway and stage. Frank McKay is the juvenile and Lew Harris the straight man. George Rehn appears as the second comic. Midgie Brandon is the ingenue. Etna Moore sings "blues" ditties. Babe Abbot is a stepping soubret. Scenically, "Jazztime Revue" compares with other shows on the Mutual circuit.

Aldine Gets Murder, Talk

They found Mimi Bellamy dead one bright morning . . . murdered. And the law pointed a stern finger at the dead woman's young husband and another woman. Then came a trial—a bit speedier perhaps than is usually the case for the movie makers fast workers. But the first trial — done in the days before the talkies became popular— wasn't such a success. It was a silent one. So the movie makers decided to hold another trial. And they pulled off another murder of the same Mimi, and bravely announced "The Bellamy Trial," an all-talking production. And this is "The Bellamy Trial" that is in the Aldine this week.

Leatrice Joy.

Well, the second murder wasn't in vain for this trial No. 2 is quite dramatic and effective. You hear the cold voice of the prosecuting attorney; the appeal to the heart in the talk of the defense counsel; the sobs of the accused woman and the faltering voice of the accused man; the kind, yet stern voice of the judge. And so you come—by ear and eye—to the surprise climax. There's the jury foreman's pronouncement. Then the anti-climax —a confession, and yes, a happy ending.

The cast, vocally and otherwise, registers well. While they talk in the court room, the action swings back to episodes that occurred on the fatal night. Leatrice Joy, Kenneth Thomson and Betty Bronson are among the players.

An interesting short feature on the bill is a novelty reel in dialogue, entitled "Lincoln Memorial." Other Vitaphone sound specialties and news pictures are offered.

FILM THRILLS ON STANLEY SCREEN

Lights and shadows move with lightning speed on the Stanley screen this week and weird sounds come from the "talkie" loud speaker. A mystery drama becomes a superlatively thrilling thriller when it is done through the medium of this new-fangled talking movie, and to get full enjoyment out of it theater patrons must develop a sixth sense to keep pace with the fast-moving action.

A notable example of this new type of super-detective drama is the Universal's talkie, "The Last Warning," which is the big thing in the Stanley's bill. It has an involved central plot and counter plots and sub-plots that so successfully mystify the audience that it is a bit difficult at the end to figure out just what it was all about.

NOVELTIES AND TRICKS

The photography abounds in camera novelties and film tricks. High spots in the dialogue are reproduced in sound with striking dramatic effect. Several notables are in the cast. The leading part is taken by Laura La Plante. Burr McIntosh, idol of the legitimate stage of the 90's, does a superb bit in an old character part.

Several favorites here are on the stage bill, including Ukelele Pat Haley, Dick Ware, Olive Fay and DeCarlos and Granada. David Broudy provides a high-class orchestra program.

Mystery of the Five Bank Directors

By EVELYN JOHNSON AND GRETTA PALMER

"WELL," said the chief of police, "four of these guys insist they never laid eyes on Battle all day today, and Colton says he just spoke to him for a moment and passed on into the other room."

"They're all so respectable and prominent, too," said Inspector Brady.

"I'll go up and look over the layout," observed the chief. "Someone else must have done it. I can't believe that one of the directors of the Nineteenth National Bank murdered the president. Of course the fingerprints on the handle of that murderer's knife will tell the tale. Lucky thing he wiped that handle off carelessly. Snyder has a swell thumbprint. He took fingerprints of all the directors for comparison. He ought to be back with his report pretty soon."

"Pretty neat," said Brady, "making the arrest the day of the murder. But you know, one of the directors must have done it. From the time that Miss Gilman, his secretary, left him until he was found dead, no one got into those rooms except the directors. I wouldn't think it was so funny if it was one of those birds that croaked Ogden F. Battle. He was a swell bank president, I don't think! He must have swiped millions, and he gypped each one of them out of a pretty fancy sum. If any of them was hard up or in an awkward position, he might seize a golden opportunity."

"COLTON says Miss Gilman was finishing up some work when he came in just after five. She left. He gave Battle a piece of his mind and moved on to the board room."

"Did you question Miss Gilman?"

"She don't know anything, except that Ogden F. was alive when she left, and that Colton turned up about five after five."

"Funny thing that they all happened to come in and go down the hall past the office one by one."

"Colton, Stoddard, Graham, Curtis and Knapp, one after the other. And they all say that Battle was sitting leaning over his desk at the far end of the room."

"Of course that big lamp was between him and them, and there wasn't much blood."

"It must have been someone he knew. He had to come and lean right over his shoulder to stick the paper knife through his spinal cord."

"He sure got it in the neck," said Brady humorously.

"Never let out a squeal," said the chief. "The Doc says the wound was right between two vertebrae and his heart action stopped right away."

"It never would have occurred to me," said Brady, "that you could kill a man by stabbing him there."

"AS a matter of fact, he didn't stab him. Just drew the knife across and made one cut."

"It takes some accuracy to do that, I'll say."

"Are you sure no one else could have got in?"

"I am. Blogg, the cashier, was sitting on a bench just outside of the corridor, waiting for some one and there absolootly ain't any other way to get into them two rooms. The windows are in full sight of Market street, and on the third floor, and nobody could hide in those two bare rooms, and anyhow a kitten couldn't have sneaked out. Blogg was still sitting there when we came, and he hadn't seen a soul but those blessed directors."

Solution of Yesterday's "Medieval Murder Mystery"

RUPERT had planned to dispose of both of his brothers that night. Knowing William's religious habits, he fastened a poisoned dagger to the beam over the prie-dieu in his brother's room by means of soft wax, which held it in place as soon as it had hardened. When William lit the taper for prayer the heat from the tall candles melted the wax and the dagger dropped, killing him. For the disposal of Nigel, Rupert had arranged the cruder device of poison in the wine which he brought back from the casks. On his way to the great hall, however, he was attacked by Nigel, who had made up his mind to get this dangerous adversary out of the way. Nigel ran Rupert through with his sword and then, becoming frightened, disposed of the body by encasing it in a suit of armor and dropping it into the moat. He then drank the poisoned wine which Rupert had prepared for him and died a most disagreeable death.

"Well, let's begin and get a line on these boys," the chief went on.

"How about looking 'em up in Who's Who as a starter?" said the inspector.

"SHOOT. Let's take them in the order they went by the office."

"Alright. 'Colton, Lawrence Eversham, banker; b. Darien, Conn, Dec. 14, 1875; s. Joseph Eversham and Mary Virginia (Allbright) C.; ed. Groton and Harvard 1899; m. "Of course they all had a pretty good motive, if you get right down to it," said the chief, "but I'd like to know a little about their families and all. You know everybody in town. How about it?"

"WELL, Colton is a society stepper. He throws big parties for anyone who turns up in town with a title or a place in Newport. He and his wife are a couple of snobs. They haven't children, but they spend a fortune on polo ponies and champagne and clubs. They'd be lost if they couldn't be the whole 400 in this town.

"Stoddard is one of these guys that lives for business. He's a fat old grouch that still goes down to business every morning at eight and counts the postage stamps every night before he goes home. He'd rather die than be a failure. Of course, just like all the pluggers of his sort, he's got a no-account son who can spend more money in an evening than he can make in a month.

"Graham is what the highbrows call a gentleman of the old school. Honor is his middle name. He'd rather be right than president of General Motors. He kicked his only son out and has never seen him again since he found out he got sent away from school for cheating. He was once in court even, for beating up a guy that passed a phony check on him. He sure is a ferocious old geezer, and the only really rich one in the bunch.

"CURTIS is the dashing one. He's pretty changeable and moody. He's a darn good athlete, even now, pretty much of a gambler, and still has an eye for the ladies. It's really on account of his wife that he's a bank director or anything like that. Her old man used to be president of the Central National, and his drag fixed up little Paul. He'd tried a little of everything before that. Even been on the stage, I hear. Knapp is a born professor. He just happened to be a lawyer, but I bet he'd really rather be reading a lot of Latin verbs. He's the only one I can't figure popping off old Ogden F. Although—"

The door opened suddenly and a detective rushed in.

"Chief," he said, "we have taken all the fingerprints, and who do you think it was—?"

"Never mind," said the chief. "We know who it was."

Who had killed Ogden F. Battle?

Muddy O'Day Wants Nancy To Reveal Her Identity To Her Grandma

CHAPTER XXXII.

NANCY awoke with a start. The bright sunlight was streaming through the east windows, flooding the bedroom of her bright little apartment so many floors up. She threw back the comfortable and jumped out of bed with the sense that she had overslept, that she would be late at the office again.

She visualized the look that would be on Harriet's face when she walked in late for the third morning that week—and this after she had been absent from the office so long.

Then, with an overpowering sense of relief, she realized it was Sunday, that she could lie luxuriously idle for an hour, or three, if she wanted to, and ponder over the happenings of the last few weeks.

How restful it was to be alone in her own rooms. There was no Ginger there smoking eternal cigarets, no cheap magazines littering the floor, no lingerie stuffed into drawers, no heaps of shoes piled in confusion on the closet floor.

And above all, there was no coffee making in her bedroom, no attaching a percolator to the electric light socket.

She could close her eyes and picture the arrangement that passed for a kitchenette concealed so artfully behind doors.

Why didn't Ginger find some nice, quiet place like this to live? It wasn't so much more expensive, everything considered, than living at The Carmondy.

Now that she was away from Ginger, and the dinginess of The Carmondy, she recalled her difficulty in leaving. Ginger had stormed, making the most outrageous statements, heaping abuse on Howard Wescott. She suspicioned it was he who had suggested that Nancy find a place by herself. But when she saw that her roommate was determined to go, she took on her old air of nonchalant indifference.

"Far be it from me to live your life," she said. "I've told you that time and again, only I wish I could save you from the knocks I've got bumping around alone. You'll get wise. I did. Guess everyone has to learn her own lessons.

"I tell you that guy Wescott is a 'big bum.' Lettin' you off three afternoons a week so you can go to business college. Gettin' so interested in finding you a quiet place to study. Say, if he's the boy I think he is he's more interested in his steno's ankles than the way she takes his dictating.

Nancy remembered how she had tried to make Ginger see things the right way. She had explained that Wescott would have done as much for any girl, Harriet even, only Harriet stiffened up every time he came near her and looked more like a stick of wood than a girl who was actually infatuated with the man she worked for.

"Do as much for any girl? Say, you're the innocent Goldie Locks, right. You'll learn. Just remember that once you're settled in that little chintz heaven up there that Ginger's your friend still. Don't be gettin' so high hat you forget me, eh, kiddo?"

Ginger answered her own question. With one of the bewildering changes so characteristic of her, she said:

"Forget me! Just you try it. I'm not goin' to let you forget me because I'm goin' to be callin' often at that little old love nest. Just to see how you're gettin' along."

"Love nest?" Nancy had exclaimed.

"Ginger Varden, what do you mean by love nest?"

"Well," Ginger had drawled. "That was all—well."

Nancy had read about the so-called love nests and she didn't like the way Ginger said what she did.

"Ginger, there's no love nesting about it. I'm earning and paying for my rooms with my own money. I don't know why you should take the attitude that you'll call just to see how I'm getting along. I want you to come, often. I want you to have tea with me and to stay with me often. It's sweet of you to be so interested in me, and I can never repay you for the way you've helped me.

"Why, I'd have starved if I hadn't met you. So please don't get such funny ideas about my going to live by myself. It's only fair to you to have this room alone. It's dreadfully crowded. Not even enough hooks to hang our clothes on."

Ginger's answer was a yawn. Her brilliantly polished nails flashed as she nonchalantly patted her fingers against her very red lips to muffle that yawn. Now, that she had spoken her mind, she was going to mind her own business.

Ginger was such a paradox. Such a mixture of recklessness and caution, interested and indifferent almost at the same time, full of worldly-wise philosophies and light as a feather about so many things that were of heart-breaking seriousness to Nancy.

And there was Vic!

As she lay back in the pillows, she remembered the way he had received the news she was leaving The Carmondy. He had raged so that she had to ask him to leave, and then he had come back, repentant, with a thousand apologies.

Nancy had told him that so long as he acted like a rational human being he was welcome to call on her in her new quarters, but that unless he did, he need never come.

She had gotten so used to making this kind of speech to Vic that she had become quite adept. And again, Vic was so in love with the manner in which she delivered her lecture, that all his anger melted.

"I just want friends who I can like and respect, and you ARE nice, Vic," she had said, "if you would only try to be, and not imagine all sorts of jealous things."

She made no mention of Howard Wescott's help in financing the pretty little apartment and she hoped Ginger would not say anything.

"How in heaven's name can you manage to get along alone like that?" Vic asked. "You're just a kid starting out. I'll say you're progressing. You must have inherited some money."

"No, I didn't inherit any money," Nancy answered. "I got a raise and decided that surroundings are important, and I'm willing to make a lot of sacrifices."

"Must have been a big raise, I'll say," Vic said.

"No, not so big," she laughed.

"Oh, for the love of Mike, let's cut the arguin'," Ginger interrupted. "Nancy's seein' things the way she wants to see 'em and what's it our business anyhow? She's going to study to be a business woman instead of a model. Well, I don't blame her. Sometimes I think modelin' is pretty rotten. The only thing is—you can sleep mornings."

Ginger, good old Ginger. She had a way of breaking into things just at the right moment.

Now as she reviewed all these things they seemed far away. Life seemed to be flowing along almost too easily for her all at once. She had to pinch herself every once in a while to realize it was not a dream.

She spread out her arms and stretched luxuriously. She was so warm, her senses so satisfied with all the prettily furnished rooms.

"I'm happy, Oh, so happ—"

The words died on her lips, blighted in their very utterance, for she knew that she had no right to be entirely happy. Not with a letter like that in the top drawer of the spinet desk by the window. She jumped out of bed—she would stay up this time, she decided—and went straight to the desk. So often she had been tempted to tear that letter into a thousand bits, but just as often some force restrained her.

It would be a sacrilege to tear up one of Muddy's letters. Nancy loved the wavering handwriting; to tear a sheet that Muddy wrote, when it was so hard for her to manage a pen, when she had to put so much of herself into the words, would have been like tearing at Muddy herself. Nancy couldn't. No, no—She had taken the letter from the drawer a hundred times. It was blurred from handling, and from Nancy's own tears. Each time she had taken it out she had put it back again.

Her little bare feet flew over the carpeting of the bedroom. Her hands fumbled in her purse for the key. Would she never find it! The drawer stuck. She jerked it, pounded her fists against it until her fingers hurt. Every time she opened that drawer for the letter her fingers seemed to be all thumbs. She dropped things.

She read again:

"Dear Nancy Girl,"

"Something's come over me. I just can't stop thinking about your real mother and father. It seems I can't stand no longer to have you down there alone among strangers when we know that somewhere in that city is your own true grandparents. I can't feel right that we never tried to let them know that their son had come back.

"It does seem as though it wasn't right no longer to keep this away from your Pa's parents, if they are alive. I can't tell you what to do no longer. You are the grandchild of rich people and maybe you should go and tell them who you are. I don't want it said that I kept you away to myself so long. It was different when you was little. You must decide for yourself now or else you might always hate me in the years to come.

"Be a good girl, Nancy, and be sure to write soon to your loving

"MOTHER."

Rereading these words affected Nancy just as it had affected her the last time she read them and the first time. Her throat tightened and she felt afraid. Her throat—she felt as though there were little knives jabbing into her. She could hardly swallow.

Dear old "Muddy" had placed the decision on Nancy's own shoulders. She had done everything she could to save Monty Deane and to bring him back to such a state of decency that he could make his own decision, to confess and claim his relationship if he wanted to. For more than 18 years she had kept Nancy to herself, clinging to her and loving her as though she were her own flesh and blood.

And now she was showing the first signs of defeat. Between the lines Nancy thought she could read that Mrs. O'Day would be relieved if she were to go to her grandparents, tell her story, and then follow whatever course she saw fit. Maggie O'Day's conscience was troubling her and her staunch old heart was weary. All at once the girl felt that she was the mother, that she must be the one to help cheer and encourage Maggie O'Day.

Go to the Deanes, reveal her identity?

Nancy had pictured the scene to herself a hundred times. She had imagined stopping in the middle of her work for Mrs. Deane some afternoon, looking up to say:

"Mrs. Deane I must tell you, you are my grandmother. Look at me. Can you see in my face no resemblance to your son, Monty, who left your house so many years ago? I am Nancy Deane. I am the daughter of Monty Deane and Julie Abbott. I've known you were my grandmother for a long, long time. Look at me, look well."

What would Mrs. Deane say? Try as she would Nancy could not imagine just what her answer would be. She would probably scoff. Or freeze her with a look.

Well, what if she did. Couldn't Nancy reach into her purse and pull out a sapphire ring, Caroline Glendenning Deane's own ring with her own name in it. A worn ring with the name so dim that it was hardly discernible? Wasn't that proof?

And if Caroline Deane wouldn't accept that as proof, couldn't she tell them about Mud and Darry O'Day, about Dr. Peabody; couldn't she produce her parents' marriage certificate.

So far she had treated Nancy so impersonally, so much like the maid who answered the door, that she had no feeling at all for her. She seemed unable to penetrate the outer circle of Mrs. Deane's consciousness. And she knew that just as herself, a girl from Mr. Wescott's office, she never could, even if she worked for her a hundred years.

"I could hardly expect her to pay any attention to me," she pondered. "Why, I've only seen her a few times."

Life was just getting to be wonderful for Nancy. No, she wasn't ready to go to the Deanes. She wasn't ready to tear herself away from the people she loved more than life or wealth.

She wanted to play her game a little longer.

Penn. Mother is Proud

Don't let constipation and its attendant ailments, such as headaches, biliousness, feverishness, fretfulness, sallow, "broken-out" skin, etc., pull your child down and make her puny, listless and underweight. At the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness, give her a little California Fig Syrup.

Children love the rich, fruity flavor of California Fig Syrup, and it never fails to start lazy bowels quickly, cleanse them thoroughly and give tone and strength to them and to the stomach so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion, makes rosy cheeks, bright eyes, helps build up and strengthen children.

A well-known Pennsylvania mother, Mrs. P. Reilly, 5258 Rodman St., Philadelphia, says: "My little daughter, Josephine, suffered from constipation until I thought it was going to keep her delicate always. She was losing weight when I started her on California Fig Syrup. In a few days it made a world of difference in her looks and actions. Now I'm proud as I can be of her; she's so ruddy, strong and plump."

Over four million bottles used a year shows the popularity of the genuine. Look for the name "California" on the carton, so you won't get a substitute.

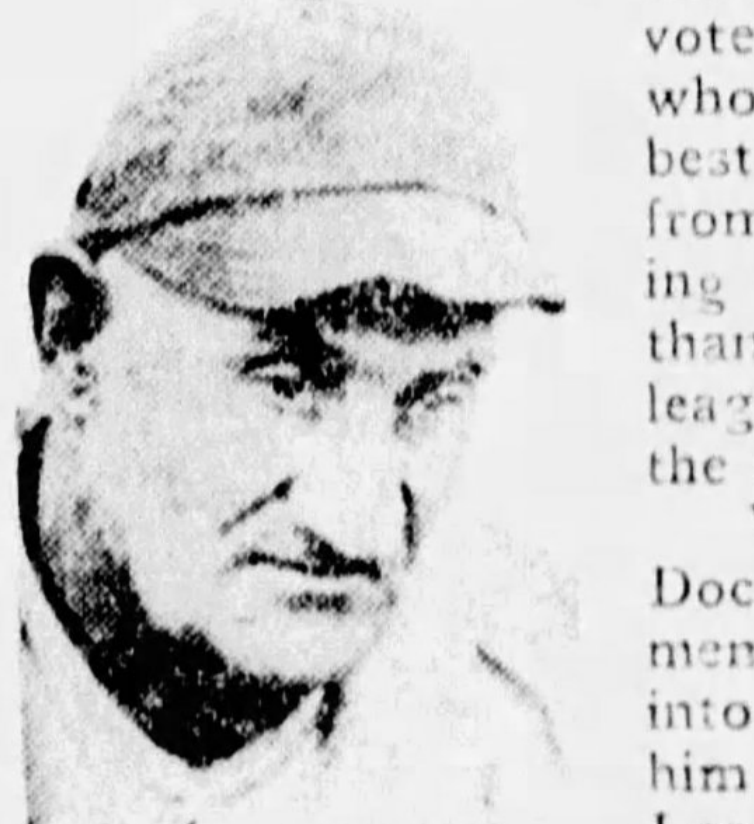
LAST OF BIG FOUR TRIED AS PILOT

NO one is quite so well qualified to pass judgment on the batting ability of any particular baseball player as a man who has pitched against him. It is from such an authortative source that Honus Wagner now gets a vote in the off-season discussion as to who was the greatest ball player or the best hitter in the past. The ballot comes from Dr. W. D. Scanlon, now practicing medicine in Brooklyn, but more than two decades ago a first-string big league pitcher who was ranked among the smartest slabmen in the business.



Honus Wagner

Veteran Pittsburgh fans will recall Doc Scanlon readily, for it was as a member of the Pirates that he broke into the big show. The Bucs obtained him from Ilion in the New York State League in September, 1903, and carried him until June of the following year, when he was released. After a short stay with the Plattsburg (N. Y.) team, Scanlon joined the Brooklyn club and was a regular pitcher for the Dodgers until the end of the 1907 season.

HAVING worked with Wagner as a teammate and also pitched against him for more than two seasons afterward, Scanlon was in a position to learn consideration about the Flying Dutchman, and he unhesitatingly pronounces Honus the greatest player of the bygone. "Wagner was the greatest of them all and there never was any player like him," Doc declares. "I certainly ought to know how he could hit. He was in a class of his own."

Scanlon recalled another well-known player of the old days when he told of having received a letter recently from Billy Bergen, onetime Brooklyn catcher, and brother of Marty Bergen, an earlier star backstop with the Boston Nationals.

"BERGEN was not of the present-day type of backstops, who are not concerned about stolen bases," said Doc. "He would be fined under the slow-motion baseball laws if he were playing now. When there was a runner on the bases Billy would waste lots of time trying to pick him off.

"The umpires often blamed me for the delay, but I was not at fault, for Bill would peg the ball around half a dozen times before he would signal me for the pitch. Those were the happy days."

Jack McAuliffe

TO the younger sport followers of today there is nothing of more than passing interest in the announcement that Billy Myers has retired as superintendent of the Washington Park race track in Chicago, but to veteran fans the appearance of Myer's name in print brings recollections of a notable period in the history of the prize ring. For Myer was a topliner in the fistic game in the old days. He was known as the Streator Cyclone, and though he never became a champion he was a contender for the lightweight title, held at that time by Jack McAuliffe, and was one of the six fighters who took part in a championship carnival that has never been paralleled in the Queensberry pastime.

SUCH a series of attractions as three world championship battles in three consecutive days in the same city is unknown in modern Glovedom, but that was the record-breaking size of a pugilistic feast spread before ring followers from all over the country, including a number of Pittsburghers, in New Orleans more than 36 years ago.

Myer was one of the principals in the first of the titular tussles. He met McAuliffe for the lightweight crown on September 5, 1892, and was knocked out in the fifteenth round. The men fought for a side bet of $5,000 and a purse of $9,000. On the following day, September 6, George Dixon defended the featherweight championship successfully against Jack Skelly, knocking him out in the eighth round, for a purse of $17,500, and one day later, or on September 7, the same city was the scene of the famous battle in which Jim Corbett wrested the heavyweight title from the supposedly invincible John L. Sullivan in 21 rounds, the first heavyweight championship fight in which gloves were used.

MYER, who was 32 years old at the time, made only two ring appearances after his defeat at the hands of McAuliffe. He faced McAuliffe again in a six-round no-decision bout in Chicago on December 16, of the same year, and lost a decision to Stanton Abbott in 15 rounds at Boston, on July 4, 1894.

Billy had fought McAuliffe once before their New Orleans meeting. That was on February 13, 1889, in North Judson, Ind., the result being a draw after 64 rounds. One of McAuliffe's arms was broken during the battle, but he fought for a draw to save the money of his backers. It is said that half a million dollars was wagered on the fight. Four years after the New Orleans engagement, McAuliffe retired undefeated, Kid Lavigne succeeding him as champion.

Walter Johnson

ANOTHER interesting angle to which attention is being drawn in connection with Walter Johnson's forthcoming debut as a major league manager, is the question as to whether he will be any more successful in that role than three other famous American League stars of his own great pitching period. H. G. Salsinger points out that Johnson is going on managerial trial as the last of the American League's immortal Big Four. The leading four players of the last two decades in the American loop were Johnson, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Eddie Collins. The last three have had their tests as managers and all of them have failed. For a time Speaker appeared to be showing some ability, but it wasn't enough to prove him a successful leader. Now comes Johnson, and he looks like the poorest bet of the lot. Evidence is piling up that it takes more than a great player to make a good manager.

AS a general rule a club that has won a pennant one year is looked upon as having a good chance to be at least a contender again in the following season, but Joe McCarthy, manager of the Cubs, is one baseball man who declines to string along with that dope in so far as it relates to the Cardinals and the National League race of 1929.

McCarthy, who is preparing to lead his Bruin advance guard out of Chicago for Catalina Island two days hence, incidentally lets it be known that he fears Pittsburgh. He was asked to name the teams that he expected to furnish the main pennant competition for his club. His reply was brief and to the point. "The Giants and Pirates," he said. In thus consigning the Cards to fourth place, Joe evidently looks for a considerable cracking out St. Louis way.

THERE may be a second chapter to the story about Ralph Kress, Brown shortstop, being allowed to name his own terms for 1929. Kress sent back his first contract unsigned and received another,

Football Relay Races Proves Success

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—The novelty football relay race, tried out here last night at the Manhattan College Diamond meet, was pronounced a huge success today. Four New York University football players, including Ken Strong, all-America halfback, defeated a Fordham quartet. Footballs were used instead of batons and forward passes were allowed inside a 15-yard zone.

Edgar Blake, of the Boston A. A., handed Johnny Gibson, former Fordham star, his first defeat of the season in the Manhattan "500."

Two Knockouts Mark Mitt Show

Four amateur boxing bouts and a battle royal marked the smoker of the Pittsburgh Railways Employes' Association in Duquesne Garden last night. Two of them were knockouts. The summary:

Paul Baint, North Side A. C., knocked out Fred Flack, Willow Club, 2 rounds; Chris Calley, Willow Club, knocked out (technical) Pat Powers, Lawrenceville Triangle, 2 rounds; Mose Butch, Willow Club, defeated Johnny Warner, Clairton A. C.; Lawrence Markey, Willow Club, defeated Eddie Hemner, Clairton A. C.

FOUR SCHOOLS FIGHT TO STAY IN RACE

Two games of great importance in the race for the Section 2, City Senior League basketball title are on the books for this afternoon. South Hills High invades Perry's North Side floor in an effort to come within reach of the coveted crown, for a Perry defeat would do just that. On the other hand, Perry is all pepped to take over the Tunnelites, even as it did Allegheny, and expects to be listed among the leaders again tomorrow.

ALLEGHENY FACES TEST

The other contest of great importance is that between Oliver and Allegheny high schools on the North Siders' court. Allegheny recently led the procession, only to be relegated to third place at the hands of Perry. If it loses again today at the hands of Oliver, Perry will have little or no title hope left; yet a victory will place it in a most desirable position, right in the midst of the fight at the top.

One other Section 2 tilt is on the books, between Carrick and Allegheny Vocational. It is just a game; neither team can possibly recover what it has already lost.

FIFTH FAVORITE

Three battles are listed for Section 1. The Silver Lakers of Westinghouse will attempt to "take" Schenley, which upset the dope by beating back the top-rung Fifth Avenue High squad recently. Fifth Avenue is not expected to meet trouble in playing Ralston on the latter's floor, while South, not out of the race yet, must carry victory over Peabody if it hopes to remain in the fight.

Heavy cards are also slated in the City Junior League and the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League. The schedule for today follows:

RACING BILL INTRODUCED

HARRISBURG, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—A bill to legalize horse racing and betting in Pennsylvania was introduced in the House last night by Representative Baldi, of Philadelphia.

Under the terms of the bill, a fee of $8,000 a day would be charged for each racing day, and this money would be paid to the state for the purpose of constructing and maintaining highways. Racing and betting would be controlled by a commission of three members.

Pari-mutuel betting machines would be lawful for use at the race-tracks in the state, a certain percentage of the total amount to be retained by association or corporation to whom a license is issued.

Representative Baldi believes that $5,000,000 would pour into the state's coffers under legalized racing and betting annually.

All racing dates would be set up by the commission and allotted to the various circuits operating in the state.

No minor under 16 would be permitted to attend the races.

Cumberland Quits Mid-Atlantic Loop

CUMBERLAND, Md., Feb. 12.—Explaining why Cumberland was not represented at the meeting of the officials of the Middle Atlantic League at Uniontown, Sunday, James F. McGuire, president of the Mid-City Baseball Association, owner of the Cumberland franchise, said the local club owners were through with the league and when the remaining five players were sold, the Cumberland franchise would be turned over to the league. McGuire said that two of the remaining five players have practically been sold. Five players had previously been disposed of of the ten on the reserve list.

McGuire said that association still retained a lease on the park, the ground being owned by the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company. The association owned outright the grandstand, bleachers and other equipment. There is a movement to have the city take over the property and establish a public playgrounds, the American Legion taking the initiative in the matter.

AL MAMAUX JESS PETTY

Whom have we here, putting on their rouge and penciling their eyebrows? None other than a couple of baseball players turned actors, Al Mamaux, former Pirate twirler and at present a member of the Newark Bears, and Jess Petty, last year with the Brooklyn Robins and traded to the Pirates for Glenn Wright during the present Stove League season. Al and Jess are playing at the Davis Theater this week, with a patter and song act, and will attend the John Gruber testimonial banquet at the William Penn Hotel Thursday night.

MATSUYAMA BEATEN BY COCHRAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Kinrey Matsuyama, mighty Japanese atom, finally met defeat in the world championship 18.2 balkline billiards tournament here. He lost to Welker Cochran, of Hollywood, Cal., 400 to 373 in 19 innings last night.

DRAMATIC MATCH

The match was one of the tensest and most dramatic ever played in the tournament series. Cochran's hard-won victory, which seemed impossible after the 92-pound Japanese piled up a lead of 362 to 263 in his fifteenth turn at the table, brought both players into a tie for the lead with three wins and one defeat apiece.

Both have one more match to play, Matsuyama meeting Jake Schaefer this afternoon while Cochran faces Schaefer tomorrow.

Cochran, winner of the 1927 tournament in Washington and one of the favorites to regain the title, was in poor stroke all night. He seemed to "fight" each shot, never appeared sure of himself, and only pulled out the struggle with a run of 102 in the fifteenth, that carried him two points ahead of Matsuyama, and a final dash of 25 that won the game in the nineteenth inning.

JAP RUNS 122

Matsuyama, who failed to win a single match in the 1927 play, but has been the sensation of this tournament, gave a courageous exhibition. Trailing the California shotmaker, 132 to 168, in the sixth inning, Mighty Matsy broke away for his longest run of the tourney, a cluster of 122. He came back with strings of 59 in the eleventh and 52 in the fifteenth, but could not break through Cochran's fine defensive play in the final innings. The inning scores:

Cochran—75, 30, 58, 0, 2, 3, 42, 9, 10, 11, 23, 0, 0, 0, 102, 9, 0, 1, 25—400.

NEW HOCKEY LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—The Middle West Amateur Hockey League, organized by Sheldon Clark, Chicago sportsman, has received its charter from the United States Amateur Hockey Association. The association has a membership of six teams—The Chicago Athletic Association, Chicago College of Osteopathy, Libertyville, Kenosha and Waterloo, Wis., and the Chicago Yacht Club.

Warner Is Here For Gruber Banquet

Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, Leland Stanford grid coach who tutored Pitt elevens for many years, is visiting friends here today and will remain to attend the John Gruber testimonial banquet at the William Penn Hotel Thursday night. Warner arrived here yesterday. He was entertained by Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland, Pitt grid coach; Charley Bowser and A. W. Stevenson, Pitt assistant coaches; Hube Wagner and other Pitt men at an informal reception at the P. A. A. last night.

Warner is to go to New York the latter part of this week to attend the meeting of the football rules committee, which is to be held there.

Westinghouse Opens New Alleys

The new Westinghouse employes' bowling alleys, a recent addition to the Westinghouse Cafeteria Building in Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, were opened today with appropriate ceremonies. F. A. Merrick, one of the vice presidents of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, rolled the first ball. The bowling plant is composed of 12 new alleys and will be used mainly by employes of the Westinghouse plant in East Pittsburgh. After the opening ceremonies an exhibition match was staged by the star bowlers of the plant. Isaac DeKiser is manager of the alleys.

FRANK ULRICH, PHIL HURLER, DEAD

BALTIMORE, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Frank Ulrich, pitcher on the Philadelphia National League club, died at his home here today of pleurisy and pneumonia, with which he had been ill for the last 12 days.

About a year ago he was taken ill with pneumonia and confined to his bed for 13 weeks, the illness leaving him in a weakened condition which prevented his pitching at all last season. The second pneumonia attack, 12 days ago, resulting in his death, came at a time when he had put on weight and was preparing to go South with the Phillies for the spring training camp.

Ulrich, who was 29 years old, was unmarried and made his home with his stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hacker, in this city.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Frank Ulrich, the best pitcher the Phillies have had in many years, was just beginning to blossom as a real star when he succumbed to pneumonia in Baltimore today. The giant righthander (he was 6 feet 1, weighing 195 in condition) was one of the most dependable pitchers in the National League in 1927, the year of the last Pirate flag—and Frank played a part in clinching that flag for the Buccos.

Ulrich was so good in 1927 that he won eight and lost eleven games with the last-place Quakers. Had he been with a first-division club that season he probably would have been high among the sharpshooters of the circuit.

GAVE PIRATES BOOST

Frank gave the Buccos a great boost in the last series of the year in the league. The Pirates were hard pressed by the Giants and Cardinals right down to the finishing tape. The Giants came here and smeared the Pirates three out of four games in their last visit.

The Buccos had a lead of only one and one-half games as they headed for Chicago for four games. The Giants, meantime, were full of confidence, but Ulrich took their measure in Philadelphia, thereby eliminating them. The Pirates won four in a row in Chicago, but had to win a game in Cincinnati to eliminate the Cardinals. This was done on the next to the last day of the season.

TRIED BY ORIOLES

Ulrich made his first showing on the sandlots of Baltimore. He was signed by Jack Dunn's Orioles, but his control was poor and he later landed in the Blue Ridge League.

Ulrich advanced to the Eastern League in 1924. Pitching for the Waterbury club under Kitty Bransfield, his performances were so fine they helped the club to two pennants.

The big pitcher got his real start in the majors in 1925 when he won three and lost the same number for the Phillies. In 1926 he copped eight victories and lost 12, his work showing an improvement all the while.

Ulrich had plenty of power, a fast screw-ball being one of his best offerings.

PETTY, MAMAUX MAKE HIT ON STAGE

By JESS CARVER.

Just a couple of young fellows tryin to get along without going to work—Jess Petty and Al Mamaux.

Jess and Al, the former slated to perform on the mound for our Pirates in the coming National League pennant race, and the latter a former wearer of the Dreyfuss regalia and at present a member of the Newark Bears in the International League, are playing the boards at the Davis Theater this week. They have a song and dance act, which, from all I can gather, is mostly song. But it's good.

Petty was obtained from the Brooklyn Robins in a trade for Glenn Wright during the present Stove League campaign. The pair of 'em, Al and Jess, are completing the final week of their vaudeville engagement. They were together last year, scoring a hit on the Keith circuit, and so far, have been getting by this season without hearing the dread knock on their dressing room door after the first performance each Monday. If I knew more about the stage I'd be better able to tell you that they are scoring pretty close to a hit.

JESS TO GO WITH BUCS

Following their engagement here, the two will part company. Jess will go West to Paso Robles with the vanguard of the Pirates next Monday night and Al returns to Newark to play a "single" for a week prior to hiking out for St. Augustine, Fla., where the Bears train.

"This racket is the nuts compared with baseball," was alluring Al's comment when asked to compare baseball and the stage. "Maybe I'll never play Hamlet but I'll take this spotlight stuff to flinging 'em over that pan for a lot of toe-hold sluggers and umpires who wouldn't call a close one a strike for their own mothers. The pay is regular and you make enough caviar towns on the circuit to make it interesting."

Petty isn't so sure about the footlight stuff, though he admits that it's much better than plumbing at which to spend one's idle hours. He is tickled to death to be in Pittsburgh. Here, let him tell it himself.

WOULD LIKE SUPPORT

"If the boys will just smack one behind me once in a while, I'll show you some real pitching this season. I figure that if Grimes goes well again, and if Kremer has a season like he had two years ago, and if one of the other boys comes through, we'll be right up there."

"You know, I was the hard luck pitcher of the league last year. Besides, I got a raw deal at Brooklyn. And you can quote me on that crack. That club went 42 innings without scoring for me. How about that? If these Pirates will only get a bit once in a while, I'll be turning 'em back. If not, it's 'out' for mine."

"Have you signed your contract yet, Jess?" I asked him.

"No, I haven't, but Barney and I ain't gonna have any trouble. We are both square shooters."

EAGER FOR BANQUET

If that isn't modesty, what is? But at that, Jess meant it. He appears to be a fine chap. He wants to win, it was easy to tell that after talking with him for a while, and he convinced his hearers that he is going to give everything he has for the Buccos this year.

"And say," Al spoke up, "you can paste this in your hat. We are tickled to death to have the chance to attend your sports dinner Thursday night. John Gruber is an old friend of mine and of Jess, too, and anything we can do to make the affair a success, just ask us. We'll be there, with bells on."

"I'm sorry you don't care for vaudeville, Mr. Carver," Petty said as we parted, "and that you can't use these five passes."

Yes, isn't it?

Cards May Form Illinois Circuit

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—The St. Louis Cardinals and possibly other major league teams are considering establishing a Class B baseball circuit in Southern Illinois with a view to using the clubs as farms, it became known here today.

Although no official announcement was made, it was made known that P. C. Bartelme and Frank Rickey, assistants to Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals in minor league relations, had just returned from a tour of the Illinois towns and had held conferences with local men interested in baseball.

Among cities visited were Harrisburg, Benton, Marion, Murphysboro, Duquoin and Cairo, Illinois, and Paducah, Ky. Reports were that other major league clubs, presumably Detroit and Cleveland were interested in the plan.

ODIE CLEGHORN RETURNS; TEX WHITE OUT

GAMES TONIGHT.
Les Canadiens vs. Pirates at Duquesne Garden (8:30).
Montreal at Ottawa.
Detroit at Boston.

By CARL W. SHATTO.

Manager Odie Cleghorn will be present and Tex White, right wing, may be absent tonight when the Pirates meet Les Canadiens of Montreal, hockey's greatest showmen, in a National League game at Duquesne Garden.

Cleghorn, ill for the last two weeks with a severe attack of grippe and tonsilitis, is sufficiently recovered to resume his managerial duties, but White, who teams up with Drury and Cotton on the spare front line, is nursing an injured ankle, and there is some question as to whether he will be able to start. Tex sustained the injury in Toronto Saturday night when one of the Leafs accidentally kicked him with his skate. He played only a few minutes in Detroit Sunday night, and has been under a doctor's care since that time.

Montreal's Flying Frenchmen, who have not been defeated in more than a month, arrived here today eager for fight. At present they are trailing the New York Americans by the margin of one game, and a victory will enable them to tie the spangled skaters for the International Group lead.

FINAL APPEARANCE

Tonight's game will mark the final appearance of Les Canadiens here this season, and a capacity crowd is likely to witness their farewell performance. Speedy, colorful Morenz and stoical, dead-shot Joliat are two of the greatest drawing cards in the history of the ice sport, and Marty Burke, stalwart defense man who wore a Pittsburgh uniform last season, is not lacking in appeal. Gagne, Lepine, Mantha and Carson are others who have helped to make the name Canadiens synonymous with fast, thrilling ice action and the club very popular here.

The game gives promise of being a furious fight from start to finish, for the invaders are eager to climb to the top and the Pirates, their morale strengthened by Cleghorn's return, have not given up hope of overtaking Detroit at getting into the ice world series. The Cougars' victory over the Pirates in Detroit Sunday enabled the Michiganders to increase their lead over the Bucs to six games, and a six-game lead is considerable of a lead when only 13 games remain on the schedule.

FACE REAL TASK

To get into the Stanley Cup playoffs, the Pirates must win all of their remaining 13 games and the Cougars must lose at least five of the 13 contests remaining on their slate. Should Detroit win seven games, the Bucs could finish the campaign with 13 straight wins and still get no better than a third place tie.

Roger Smith, whose return to his best form has made him a tower of strength since the early weeks of the campaign, and Bert McCaffrey are to draw the defense assignments. Owner Benny Leonard paired McCaffrey with Smith during his tenure as pilot, and Manager Cleghorn is to make no change. All of the Bucs other than White are in the best of condition. They held the Canadiens even in two previous meetings this season, and they do not expect to suffer a relapse tonight. The probable lineup:

Canadiens	Pos.	Pirates.
Hainsworth	G	Miller
J. Mantha	R. D.	McCaffrey
Burke	L. D.	Smith
Morenz	C	Frederickson
Gagne	R. W.	Darragh
Joliat	L. W.	Milks

Canadien spares: Lepine, Mondou, Patterson, Carson, G. Mantha. Pirate spares: Drury, White, Cotton, McCurry, McKinnon and Holway.

with the salary space left blank, and bearing the notation, "Write your own ticket."

The young shortstop inserted "$7,000," and has been telling his neighbors in Oakland, Cal., that "everything is jake." But there may be an awakening. It takes two to make a contract, and reports from St. Louis say that the Brown owners are not at all enthusiastic over the salary that Kress suggested for himself and will demand that he reduce the figures. They had not expected he would go that high.

Lester Patrick

LESTER PATRICK, manager of the New York Rangers and considered by many the smartest hockey man now in the game, uses a school slate on which to map out a plan of battle for his players before they go on the ice for a game. "I like to chart my plays just before the start," he told Harold Burr. "It burnishes up the boys' memories of what I've been drilling into them." Here are some snatches of Patrick's talk as he gives his chalk lecture: "Taffy, you listen to this, and you, too, Leo," this for the benefit of Abel and Gourgault. "And you, Bill, don't let him get out in the middle. If you've got the puck here (marking a spot on the slate) pass it to Bunny. And watch that forward." And so on until the slate is all criss crossed with white lines. Finally, "that's all. All right now, everybody. Go and get your bumps. And don't forget—do some bumping yourself!" That's the system that made the Rangers world champions.

DUKES BATTLE CATHOLIC U. TONIGHT

By JESS CARVER.

Tonight is the last night this week of basketball inactivity in Pittsburgh. From now on until Sunday, there will be something important doing every night, in addition to the usual run of bridge and poker sessions, evenings in with the frau and evenings out with sick friends.

Of course there is no game booked for Thursday, for that's the night we'll all be at the John Gruber testimonial banquet at the William Penn Hotel. All the basketballers will be there, with the coaches and managers. It will be better than a dozen ball games.

SIX IN ACTION

Six of the 17 tri-state college basketball teams are engaged in out-of-town contests tonight, the program serving as sort of an appetizer for the big schedule which begins tomorrow. The Dukes meet Catholic University in Washington, D. C., in the third game of their eastern trip. West Virginia continues its road running by playing Virginia at Charlottesville. Grove City and Thiel clash in a return game at Grove City and Geneva plays Allegheny at Meadville.

The Panthers of Pitt and the Tartans of Carnegie will put the final touches on their games in preparation for contests scheduled for tomorrow. Pitt plays Wash-Jeff in the Stadium Pavilion in a Big Four contest. Carnegie invades New Wilmington for a game with Westminster.

The Titans appeared here a couple weeks or so ago and lit on the Skibos like a ton or so of brick. Wash-Jeff has played two district opponents, losing to both Bethany and Allegheny.

W. & J. HANDICAPPED

W. and J. was handicapped severely early in the season by the flu, which put the kibosh on practice sessions and necessitated the cancellation of early games on the Red and Black card. On the trip through the central part of the state last week, however, Andy Kerr's quintet played good basketball, putting up stiff battles against Juniata, Bucknell and Penn State. The boys figure to give Pitt trouble tomorrow.

The addition of Brownlee, former Kiskite, to the Westminster squad has improved Westminster's chances no little. Crowell has been playing center regularly, but the big Redhead is troubled with bad eyes, and naturally is not a sure handler of the ball. Brownlee has had some experience, at least he showed that he knew plenty about the game against Bethany last week.

HILL FIRST BUC TO LEAVE FOR CAMP

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

The spring training season of the Pirates was moved ahead today with the announcement from the club headquarters to the effect that Pitcher Carmen Hill, at his own request, had obtained permission to leave for the Paso Robles camp immediately. PRO FLOOR VETS TO HONOR GRUBER

By JULIUS LEVIN.

Pioneers of professional basketball, men who played a prominent part in laying the foundation for the success of the popular winter indoor pastime in the Greater Pittsburgh district, will hold a reunion in conjunction with the John H. Gruber testimonial banquet, to be staged Thursday evening in the William Penn Hotel ballroom under the auspices of the Pittsburgh chapter Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Eager to pay tribute to the dean of America's baseball scorers, the oldtime basketball favorites have reserved several tables for the Gruber testimonial and will be out to honor Uncle John in full force.

ROUND UP STARS

John J. Freund, Jr., local basketball promoter and president of the Tri-State Officials' Association, is in charge of running up the former local professional stars. Among the veterans making reservations at the Oldtimers' tables are Charles (Dim) Zange, one of the best referees in the original Central League now engaged in plumbing business in Steubenville; P. Swingswood, of East Liverpool, a real dyed-in-the-wool fan, who remembers when Bill Powell, Joe Leithead and others broke into professional basketball; George Kallock, star of the D. C. & A. C. team of 1900, now with Philadelphia Company; John (Red) Geisler, of Crafton, former star with the Hans Wagner Five, now a member of the Allegheny County detective force; Walter (Dutch) Wohlfarth, former Eastern League star, now a prosperous Homestead merchant and president of the Homestead District League; Joe Leithead, captain and coach of the Original South Side team, one of the strongest professional quintets ever to represent Pittsburgh, now with Hillman Coal and Coke Company; Harry (Dough) Barry, former star of the Manchester team of 1900, now a prominent local baker; Charles Gross, a former member of the South Side team, now with the A. M. Byers Company; William H. (Bill) Griffith, a star with the five Original Griffith Brothers, now a member of the Tri-States Officials' Association. Freund himself, sponsor of several local basketball leagues and former manager of the South Side team in the Central League; Joe Goldman, former manager of the Pittsburgh Morrys; Dave Mervis, former Morry star, now a Tri-State official, and several other prominent stars of yesteryear. William Stolzenbach, another former South Side star, planned to attend the banquet, but was forced to cancel his reservation because of a trip to Florida.

RESERVATIONS OPEN

Any other basketball veterans desiring to renew acquaintances with their former teammates at the Gruber Testimonial are asked to call John L. Hernon at Montrose 4715 or J. J. Freund at Lafayette 4297.

Another group of basketball figures, composed mainly of present-day enthusiasts, have reserved a table at the banquet. Headed by the members of the 709 Club, this table will include Dr. L. C. Beinhauer, Louis Gordon, Meyer Goldenson, Morry Goldman, Jack Weiners, A. R. Geyer and a number of local basketball stars.

Shower Breaks Up Sharkey's Workout

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—A tropical shower which broke into Jack Sharkey's training schedule yesterday forced him to postpone his scheduled workout and the Boston Sailor had to contest himself with a session of road work under a hot sun this morning.

Meanwhile, Young Stribling, who meets Sharkey in Flamingo Park Arena, February 27, was idle, except for three miles of road work.

He will go into the Everglades today to do some fishing, returning to throw himself into intensive training.

Pa Stribling, representing his son; Johnny Buckley for Jack Sharkey, and Jack Dempsey, promoter of the bout, will confer tomorrow on the selection of a referee for the contest.

DRIBBLES

The Loendi Club will have the Enoch Rauhs as its attraction tonight on the Pythian Hall floor. The Loendis already have defeated the Goldensons and Miele-Franchinas and will be out to score their third victory over an Allegheny County League team at the expense of the Rauhs.

The McKeesport Alumni, favorites to win the second half of the P. & O. League championship, will face a tough assignment tonight when they meet the South Side Mangans at McKeesport. In the other league game the Morrys appear at Immaculate Heart. Both games bring together smooth-working floor machines and the fans at both halls to win the second half of the P. & should be treated to some fast basketball.

Two big games are scheduled tonight in the South Side Market House, P. & L. E. meeting Peoples Savings & Trust, while Duquesne Light tackles the Nat-Co Five. Both games are Commercial-Industrial games. The Railroaders have shown a big improvement in the second half and are making a determined bid for a place in the playoffs. They have defeated Kaufmanns and Carnegie Steel and will be out to make it three in a row over Peoples.

P. A. A. BOWLERS LEAD TENPIN TOURNEY

Pittsburgh Athletic Association bowlers made a clean sweep in the first day's rolling of the annual Tri-State tenpin tournament on the Club Alleys, taking the honors in the five-man event, doubles and singles.

Those who were good enough to carry off the first of the daily prizes were C. P. Fordt, who was high for a single game with 236; L. Marone, who had a three-game individual tally of 599; Marone and Cosolosky, with 428 in the doubles, and P. A. A. team No. 4, 816, in the five-man play.

The rolling yesterday was not as good as it might have been, due to the natural nervousness caused by the first bit of competition. Teams roll again tonight at 8:30 o'clock. There will be no doubles or singles matches. Tonight's team schedule:

Bureau of Mines No. 1, Edward Taylor, captain; Bureau of Mines No. 2, of Pittsburgh, W. J. Morris, captain; Bureau of Mines No. 3, of Pittsburgh, G. W. In the other contest, the Mieles broke their recent hard luck streak by nosing out Reliance Life, 29 to 27, in a spectacular performance at Columbus Temple. Although the Lifers led, 18-10, at half-time, the Mieles overtook them in the second half, and Hooks Shrello netted the field goals that won the game shortly before time was up. The lineups:

REAL TEST OF RESERVE BOARD LOAN RULING AWAITED

RALLY SHOWS STREET NOT "SCARED"

By W. S. COUSINS,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Another holiday in the financial district today provides a breathing spell and an opportunity to survey the effects of the recent epoch-making rulings of the Federal Reserve Board on the subject of speculative loans.

It might be said that yesterday's rally in industrial stocks proved that the "scare" thrown into the market by the reserve board's threat to cut off the banks' loaning to the stock market had not penetrated very deeply; but a session sandwiched in between a double and a single holiday is hardly a time to judge of the influence of such weighty matters. The reserve board left no room for doubt that it will not tolerate the draining of money from legitimate business channels to feed a roaring bull market, and that goes for all time, rally or no rally.

CONGRESS ACTS

Both houses of Congress have been stirred to action, passing resolutions that might otherwise have been permitted to die in committee. The Senate, condemning in serious debate the tieing up of $7,000,000,000 "with harmful effects on agriculture and legitimate industry" as the result of the unregulated "gambling" on the Stock Exchange, demanded a legislative curb on speculation in stocks.

The House considered a resolution asking for an investigation of loans by the reserve banks, and asked for an inquiry as to the effect of fluctuations in discount rates since 1925 on prices of cotton, tobacco, corn, wheat, swine and cattle. The Reserve Board and the Banking and Currency Committee will have a big job on their hands, but skillful investigations vigorously pursued may bring to light some interesting and valuable information.

WATCH FOR SQUALLS

After the close of the market on Thursday, there will be the first opportunity to check up on the effect of the reserve board's statement relative to the speculative borrowing situation. If brokers' loans show a further increase, look out for squalls, the first of which may appear in the form of an increase in the rediscount rate of the New York Reserve Bank.

Monday's sharp rally, in the course of which the speculative favorites won back 3 to 10 points of last week's losses, makes it appear doubtful if the squeezing out of speculative loans by last week's collapse will show up as expected.

Tidal Osage Year's Net Shows Decrease

The annual report of the Tidal Oil Company, in which a controversy over management is raging between a group of minority stockholders and the Tide Water Oil interests, which control Tidal, shows net earnings of $2,019,003, equal to $3.25 a share on the 631,319 shares outstanding for 1928, as compared with $2,413,952, or $3.99 a share, in 1927. Net before charges was $1,673,280, which, with $828,191 other income and $688,034 from sale of capital assets, raised total income to $3,941,472. Cash dividends for the year were $2,840,935. Charges for depletion, depreciation, development and abandoned leases totaled $1,453,082. The company paid four quarterly dividends of 50 cents each and a special dividend of $2.50 a share during 1928.

HARBISON FIRM REPORTS GAIN IN EARNINGS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

LAST year was one of the best in the history of the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company. Net income of $4,412,533 showed an increase of 10 per cent over the $4,012,268 reported for the previous year.

Net for 1928 was equivalent to $2.91 a share on the 1,440,000 shares of new no par value common stock after deducting dividends on the $3,000,000 of 6 per cent cumulative preferred. This compared with $10.65 a share in the old stock in 1927. On the basis of the present capitalization the previous year's earnings would be equal to $2.66 a share. The old stock was split 4 shares for 1 in the latter part of 1928 and the now stock was placed on a $2 annual dividend basis.

The increase in net income was shown after making far more liberal charges for depreciation in 1928 than were made in preceding years. The amount allowed for depreciation of plants was $950,000 compared with $550,000 in 1927. The increase in the figure was due to the abandonment of an unusually large amount of equipment made obsolete by the installation of more modern machinery.

THE report indicates that $2,767,924 was added to the value of plants through the completion of improvements during the year. The construction program which was started in 1928 was continued with the installation of new tunnel kilns at the Templeton, Pa., Clearfield, Pa., and East Chicago, Ind., plants. The total cost of these improvements made during the past two years was about $3,000,000.

H. W. Croft, chairman of the board, stated that the orders carried over from 1928, together with the new business secured in January, indicated a satisfactory operation of plants for the major portion of the first six months at least.

The improvements to plants were made without any outside financing. This reduced working capital to some extent but, even after providing for the capital expenditures, the company remained in a strong current financial position.

CURRENT assets of $6,791,058 were over 4 times current liabilities of $1,608,352. Cash amounted to $1,229,369.

Investment securities were also reduced during the year to provide for improvements. At the close of 1928 these were valued at $6,154, compared with $6,924,414 at the end of 1927. Investments are carried at cost or market, whichever is lower.

Although the investment account is not included among the current assets it represents securities which are readily marketable. The last published list of the stockholders of the United States Steel Corporation showed that the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company was the owner of 20,000 shares.

RESERVES shown on the balance sheet amounted to $2,092,825, a reduction of $1,592,113 indicating that provision had been made in advance for part of the write-offs found necessary in 1928.

The company may be expected to show an even better ratio of earnings to sales in future years than has been reported in the past. The replacement of old intermittent kilns for burning fire brick with modern continuous kilns is expected to substantially reduce costs. The year just reported shows the benefits of only a small part of the improvement program. With the new equipment in operation the present year will benefit from the full economies.

Sharon Steel Hoop Income Increases

Sharon Steel Hoop Company and subsidiaries report for year ended December 31, 1928, net income of $971,853 after interest, depreciation, federal taxes, etc., equivalent after 8 per cent preferred dividends, to $3.11 a share (par $50) earned on 286,240 shares of common stock. This compares with $555,518, or $1.65 a share, in 1927.

Consolidated income account for year, 1928, compares as follows:

	1928	1927
Operating profit	$2,163,711	$1,841,872
Depreciation, etc	866,441	895,866

Daily Oil Output 2,690,350 Barrels

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Oil production in this country reached an estimated daily average of 2,690,350 barrels during the week ended February 9, said the Oil and Gas Journal today. The average was 12,115 barrels higher than that of the previous week, the total again setting a new high record for the fifth consecutive week.

The Santa Fe Springs area continued to show increased output, adding 12,000 barrels last week to its estimated daily average.

NEW FACTS ON LINCOLN SPEECH AT GETTSBURG

ister, sounded like a benediction—"this Nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and . . . government of the people, by the people and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

The Crowd Reverent

Lincoln again glanced over his spectacles, this time looking in the direction of the graves. Slowly he stepped backward and, half-turning, resumed his seat. His words seemed to linger. Men bowed their heads. Women's eyes filled with tears. Little children stood in awe. The choir sang a dirge and the solemn measure of the music seemed to echo Lincoln's elegy in prose. The people remained motionless as if transfixed. The Rev. Dr. H. L. Baugher, president of Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, offered the closing prayer, and the audience melted away. The crippled soldiers paused for a final look across the battlefield and then, they too, withdrew, hobbling off on their canes and crutches.

In the crowd that left the platform and moved away in the direction of the cemetery gate on the Baltimore pike a tall figure in a very tall black hat towered above the multitude. There had been no applause when Lincoln spoke, and now when he departed the people conversed in subdued voices. Their souls had been touched by those immortal words just as today's generation feels their divine inspiration.

MR. TIPTON'S recollections of Lincoln's Gettysburg address go back to those peaceful days in the serene Cumberland valley long ante-dating the battle. In his accounts, description of the words of the tall black-clothed figure on the platform is a fitting climax to one of the most entrancing reminiscences of the wartime.

The early summer of 1863 was filled with alarm for the residents of the Cumberland valley. Early in June the Confederate General Ewell, leading the advance of Lee's invading army, entered Southern Pennsylvania and raided through Gettysburg on their way to the Susquehanna. On June 30 there was another incursion in the town and on the evening of that day Union cavalry approached. The townspeople knew that the stage was being set for a conflict between the two great armies.

A New Version

Wednesday, July 1, saw the inhabitants of Gettysburg astir early. Mr. Tipton, then a lad in his fourteenth year, joined other youngsters in following a brigade of Union cavalry that galloped westward along Chambersburg street in the direction of the Lutheran Seminary. A short way down the street they met John Burns, town constable and a veteran of the Mexican War. Burns has been pictured as wearing Revolutionary regimentals, a high bell-crowned beaver hat and carrying an ancient flint-lock musket.

"As a matter of fact," says Mr. Tipton, "Burns wore a long linen duster. I don't know what he had under it, but that doesn't matter. He had a slouch hat. He carried his favorite rifle. He followed on the heels of the cavalry, but stopped near the outskirts of the town to berate a one-eyed man who refused to join him. At the top of the hill we saw the cavalrymen proceeding through the fields along the Chambersburg pike, where they began to dismount. Away off to the left, along the Fairfield road, a cloud of dust indicated the approach of the Union troops of Gen. John F. Reynolds' corps. Constable Burns started in their direction. With my companions I climbed on a rail fence to watch the cavalry.

"It was about two hours after sunrise on a beautiful day. A Union officer called to us: 'You little devils, get off that fence and go home.' He might as well have spoken to the stakes of the fence. Then we heard several musket shots away off in front. We climbed higher on the fence for a better view. A cannon roared away off down the pike in the direction of the rebel lines. It was followed an instant later by the shriek of a shell that crashed through the trees on our right and exploded not very far off. We plunged from the fence and breathlessly ran home, while behind us we heard the roar of cannon, the roll of musketry and the cheers of the Union reinforcements that were joining in the battle. And a little while later came the wounded. Soon every public building and many of the homes of the town were filled with maimed soldiers.

"John Burns joined the Iron Brigade and was wounded three times. When the Union troops fell back, leaving many of their wounded behind, our fighting constable fell into the hands of the Confederates, but he told his captors that he was a farmer looking for his stray cows. He was not made a prisoner and recovered from his wounds, living until 1874."

The Memorial Shrine

FOR weeks after the battle, Gettysburg and the surrounding country presented a scene of desolation. The fields were littered with broken cannon, gun carriages, wagons, caissons, muskets, bayonets, canteens and other articles left behind. Many houses and barns had been burned or wrecked, and fences were torn down. Gov Andrew G. Curtin, of Pennsylvania, visiting the community soon after the close of the action, superintended the work of rehabilitation. When the press of executive duties compelled him to leave, he appointed Judge David Wills, of Adams county, one of the leading residents of Gettysburg, to act in his stead.

The thousands of slain who had fallen in the three-day fight had been hastily buried and in many instances in shallow trenches. Within a few weeks some of the bodies were exposed. Horrified by the sight, Judge Wills on July 24, 1863, wrote Gov. Curtin suggesting that land be acquired for a permanent burial place where the dead could be re-interred. Curtin acquiesced and Judge Wills, acting for all the Northern states whose soldiers were in the battle, bought 17 acres in an orchard adjoining the Evergreen cemetery in Gettysburg, the land having been the scene of severe fighting.

Bids were recieved for the removal of the bodies and the lowest bidder was given the contract for $1.59 for each body, re-interred. The bodies were removed from the shallow trneches on the battlefield and placed in coffins. They were finally buried in plots according to states. The work was undertaken October 27, 1863, and completed March 18, 1864. Of the 3,354 bodies of Union soldiers removed, 979 were unidentified.

The Field Dedicated

Gov. Curtin urged the prompt dedication of the ground as a National cemetery and Thursday, October 23, was fixed as the date. Edward Everett was chosen as the orator, but when he stated that he could not be present on the date selected, he was allowed to suit his own convenience and suggested November 19. There are no records showing that the President of the United States was consulted as to the date. Invitations were sent to him as well as to Gen. George G. Meade, Union commander in the battle; Gen. Winfield Scott, ranking officer in the Northern armies; the President's cabinet and many other dignitaries. Preparations had been planned for a great parade and demonstration under the direction of Gen. D. N. Couch, commander of the Pennsylvania department.

Gens. Scott and Meade and many other dignitaries failed to come. President Lincoln and his party, with the Marine Band, traveling on a special train, arrived in the town late in the afternoon of November 18.

"I was at the station when the train came in," says Mr. Tipton. "I had never seen a President and I was anxious to look at this homely man. But I saw not a trace of homeliness about him. He was gentle, kindly and good humored. He rode in a barouche to the Judge Wills residence, a three-story brick house in the public square, which was to be his home during his stay. Our place was next door and every time Lincoln left the house I saw him.

"In the evening students from the college serenaded the President. He came to the door and made a few remarks, which I have forgotten. There is a story that he scribbled the notes for his speech while on the train en route from Washington. This may be true, but during the evening he sent to Judge Wills' office for paper and worked on his speech. These were the slips of paper he held in his hands while on the platform.

"It has been asserted that the car on which he made the trip to Gettysburg is still in existence and will be exhibited. Don't let them fool you. The car he occupied was wrecked long ago and destroyed.

Lincoln's Horse Balks

"Secretary Seward and other cabinet officers were housed in the residence of Robert Goodlow Harper, adjoining the Wills home. Sergt. Paxton Bigham was guard at Lincoln's door and James Reppert was messenger. They were my friends and I was kept well informed as to what was going on. During the evening Lincoln received a telegram from the White House stating that his little son, Willie, who was very ill, had passed the crisis. 'That is the best news I have had in a long, long time,' the President said.

"On the morning of the dedication thousands of persons arrived in the town by train, in carriages, buggies and wagons, on horseback and on foot. At 9 o'clock the procession began to form in the public square. The horse selected for the President to ride was brought up, but he reared and kicked when the Marine Band and Birgfield's band from Philadelphia struck up their music for the parade to move. Another horse must be had quickly. Adam Reppert, who had just been elected sheriff, ran to his stable and led forth a magnificent bay horse. Lincoln mounted the steed and showed that he was not unused to horsemanship.

"Many tales have been told of Lincoln's awkwardness on horseback and that his feet almost touched the ground. These may be classed with other Lincoln fictions. During his early life horseback riding was the only mode of travel in the West and I remember that he seemed perfectly at ease while he sat there waiting for the parade to start. Seward and another prominent man in the party were standing in front of the Wills house and I remember Lincoln leaning over and conversing earnestly with them. No one else could hear, but suddenly both men broke into unrestrained laughter and we knew that he was telling a funny story.

Speech Delivered

"At 10 o'clock the procession moved out Baltimore street to the Emmittsburg road to the Taneytown road entrance to the cemetery. The platform was about 20 feet square and about four and one-half feet from the ground. The speakers faced the north. Lincoln stood on the spot now marked by the national monument. In the audience were about 5,000 persons. Rev. T. H. Stockton, of Washington, offered prayer and after a musical selection by the Marine band, Everett read his oration. It was a set speech delivered in that orator's best style, but it rang with a challenge while Lincoln's remarks breathed humility before God and the resolution to carry on the cause our brave men had died to defend."

Following Everett's speech, which had been greeted by ringing applause, a hymn was sung by the choir. All were local singers. They were Robert Little, a schoolmaster and superintendent of the Reformed Church Sunday school; Robert Witherow, of the Presbyterian Church choir; Miss Mattie Martin, also of the Presbyterian choir, and Miss Tillie Gillespie, who sang in the Lutheran Church. The hymn was composed for the occasion by B. B. French. All have long since passed away.

"After the exercises we hurried home for dinner. Lincoln's party returned to the Wills residence. In the afternoon a memorial meeting was held in the Presbyterian Church and Constable John Burns, still suffering from his wounds, and President Abraham Lincoln walked to the meeting arm-in-arm.

"The pew occupied by Lincoln at the meeting is marked by a tablet. The President did not speak at this gathering and when it closed he returned to the Wills house, took leave of his Gettysburg friends and rode in the barouche to his train. The town had no holiday air. The crowds were leaving.

"I was at the station when the special cars pulled away. With me were many of the same lads with whom I had played in the summer. There in the evening mists we watched as the great President was carried in his train back to Washington—watched with the same boyish enthusiasm that had caused us to follow old John Burns to the firing line on the July morning when hostile cannon signaled the opening of the battle."

American Industry Hewing Closer to Lincoln's Ideals.

By B. C. FORBES

LINCOLN'S grip upon America, upon the world, increases. The reason?

In a small Southern city, years ago, a country lad was rapidly making his mark in a bank. Country folks especially were attracted to him, and the bank's business was increasing at a rate which attracted local attention. One morning a country caller stood waiting outside the bank and asked a passer-by when it would open. After giving the information and being told the visitor's mission, the local citizen asked, "Tell me, why do so many of you folks from the country come to see this young man?"

"I suppose it is because he is so durned common," came the reply.

The youthful banker was Percy H. Johnston, who, when only in his thirties, became president of the famous Chemical National Bank of New York.

Is it not because he was so "durned common" that Lincoln's hold upon mankind grows? George Washington typified the flower of America's aristocracy. Abe Lincoln personified democracy.

Shakespeare charmed the intellect of his own day and of all subsequent generations, but Dickens won a warmer place in the hearts of his fellow countrymen and he is more widely read in Britian than is Shakespeare. Sir Walter Scott, an aristocrat, delighted with his brilliance; but it is Robert Burns, who foresaw and sang of the essential democracy of the human race that lives and glows incomparably today. Burns was the prototype of Lincoln. It was Scotland's plowman, bard who foretold, "It's comin' yet, for a' that, that man to man the world o'er will brithers be for a' that."

WHAT can the industrial and business world learn from the career of Lincoln?

Among other things, the value of winning good will, the co-operation, the loyalty, the liking of others; the importance of becoming saturated through and through with the spirit of democracy; and, too, the wisdom of generously sharing honors and rewards with others.

AMERICA'S towering business organizations are today run more democratically than before. The president of General Motors carries this principle so far that he never gives an order to those associated with him; every problem is fully discussed by all those interested and affected and no step is taken until all agree on its desirability. Also, this most profitable of all the world's corporations is the most liberal sharer of profits with those who help to make the profits, from high executive to ordinary workman.

AMERICA astounds Europeans who come here to study our industrialism. They cannot fathom how it has been possible to bring about the co-operation existing here between employers and employed, between executives and wage-earners. The enthusiasm of workers over new "records" achieved by their concerns baffles foreign employers as well as foreign trade union delegates sent over here.

THIS spirit of co-operation is becoming vividly illustrated, also, between companies engaged in the same industry. Trade associations of all kinds are multiplying as never before. Helpful knowledge gained by one concern frequently is made freely available to other concerns. Discoveries made in our numerous magnificent research laboratories are promptly given to the world.

THE modern industrial and business trend in the land of Abraham Lincoln is becoming increasingly in harmony with the character and ideals of Abraham Lincoln. Cynics may sneeringly deny it, but it is profoundly true that the goal set by the most enlightened of our great business enterprises, today is the better service of the public, the furnishing of the greatest possible value at the lowest possible cost.

IN these days of quickly acquired riches through speculation, riches which beget envy and stir up other unfortunate feelings, there is one phase of Lincoln's career which is worth pondering. Lincoln attained no mushroom success. He plodded and tasted defeat more than most mortals.

At 23 he was defeated as a candidate for the Illinois Legislature. Before he was 30, he was a candidate for Speaker of the House in Illinois and was defeated. Two years later he was defeated a second time. At 34, he was a candidate for Congress and was defeated. At 35, he was defeated as a presidential elector. At 40 he failed to become Commissioner of the General Land Office. At 43 he was again defeated as a candidate for presidential elector. At 46 he ran for the United States Senate and was defeated. At 47 he was a candidate for nomination for the Vice-Presidency and was defeated. At 49 he was defeated a second time as candidate for the Senate. At 50 he had known little but defeat.

THE closer industrial America hews to Lincoln's principles and practices, the more Lincoln is set by as a model by our ambitious young men, the more worthy will the nation become of his struggles and sacrifices.

GAIN REPORTED IN EARNINGS

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Several large corporations, including the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and subsidiaries and the United States Tobacco Company, published annual earnings statements today showing increased profits.

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company's 1928 net profit totaled $13,327,843 against $13,135,666 the preceding year.

Net earnings of $2,660,390, equivalent to $5.96 a share, against $2,576,870, or $5.74 a share in 1927, were shown in the report of the United States Tobacco Company.

Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and subsidaries for the year ended August 31 reported net profits of $5,396,717 against $2,946,600 the previous year. The profit was equivalent to $31.21 a share on 172,876 shares of preferred stock. The common stock is owned by Loew's, Incorporated.

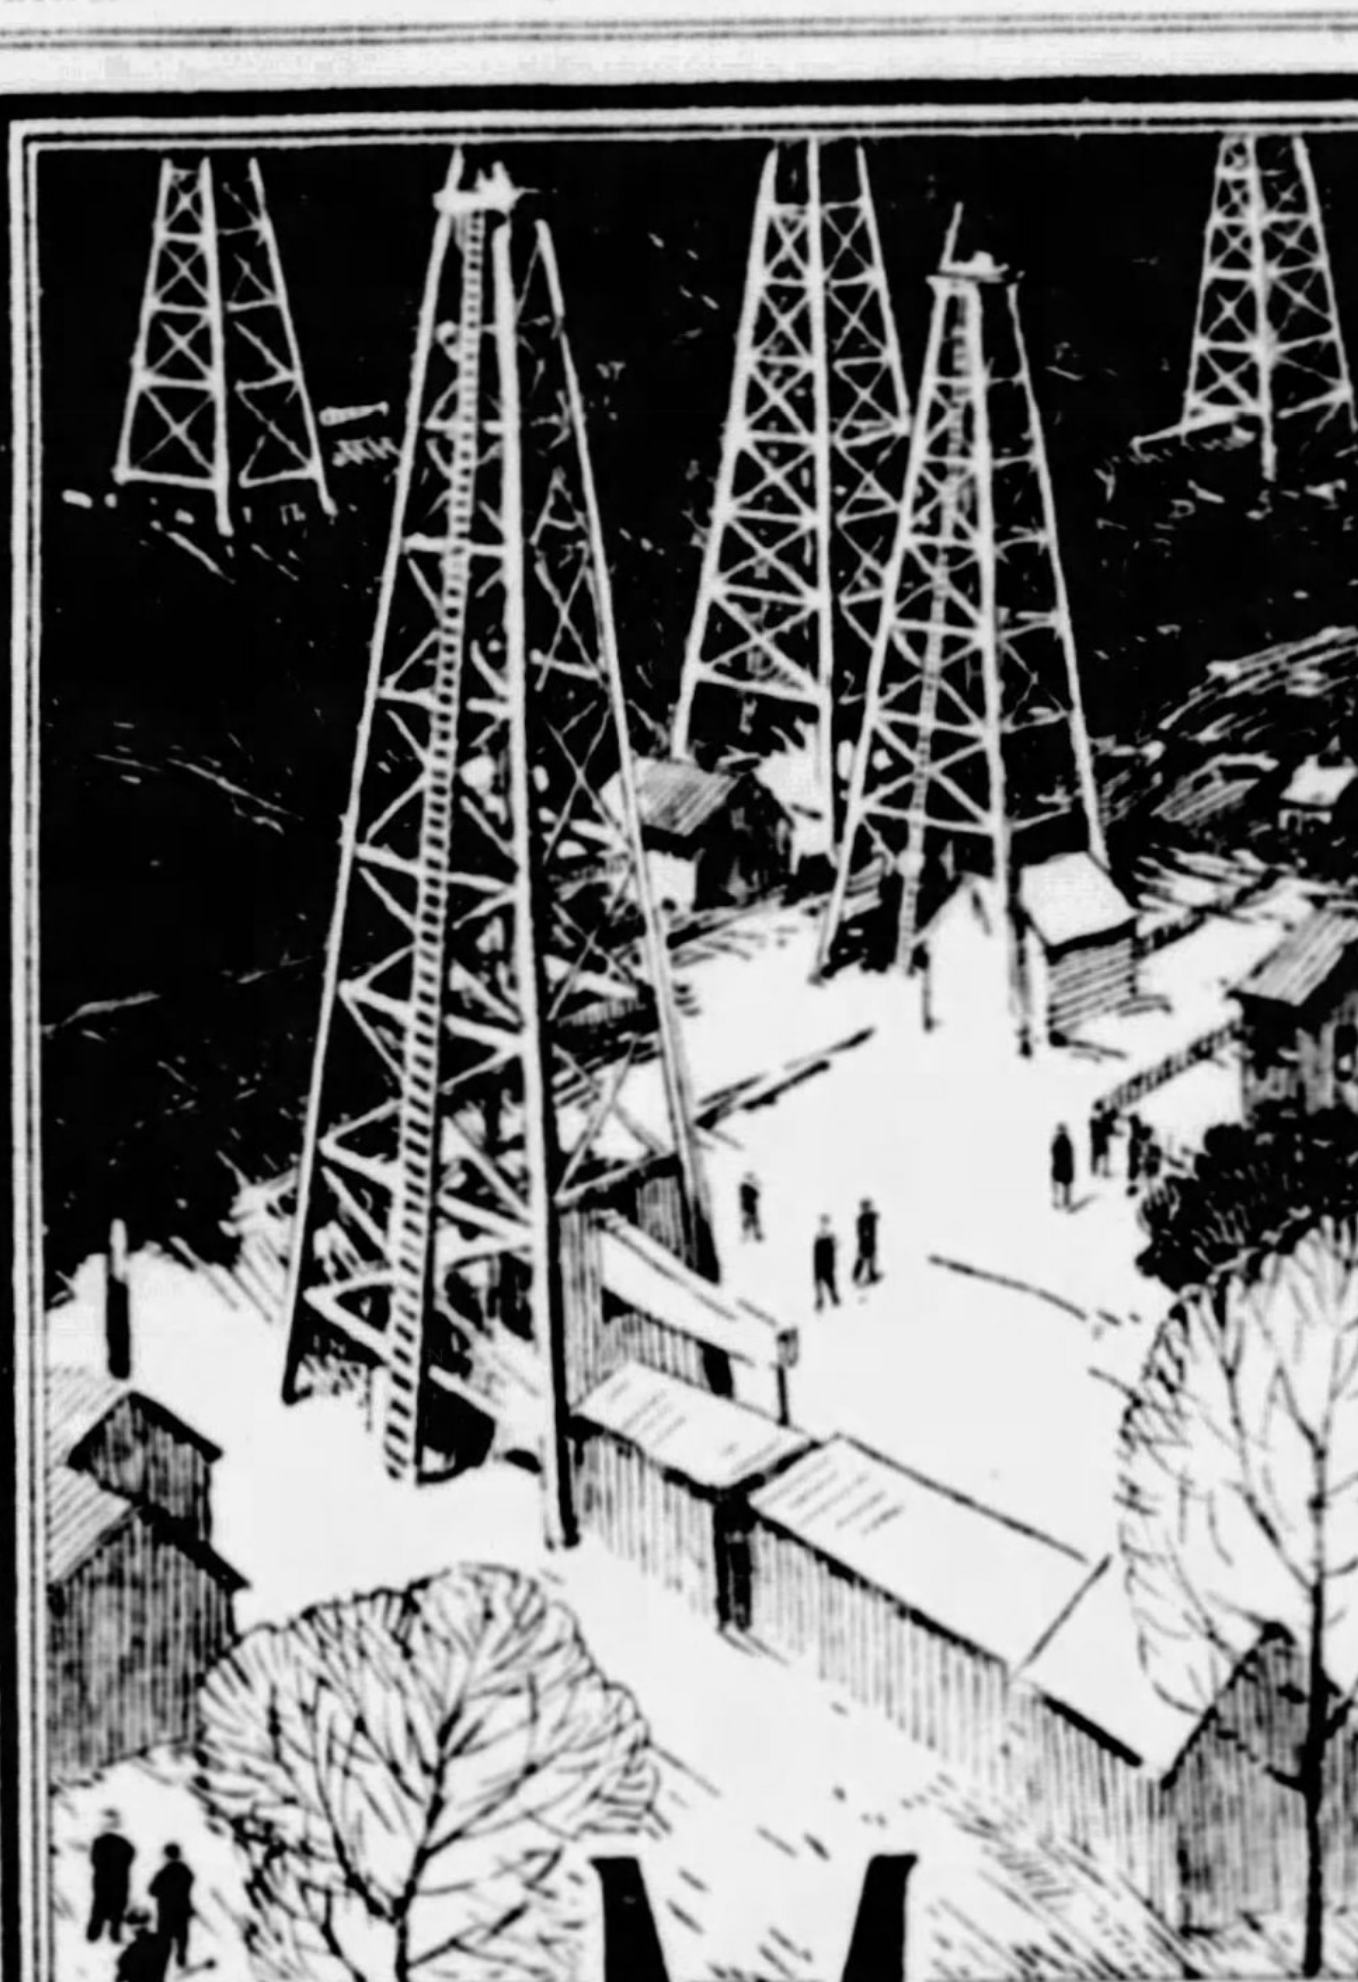
Net profit of Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia, decreased in 1928 to $332,210 contrasted with $2,242,200 in 1927 as results of a bad year for locomotive orders.

Child Company's net 1928 profit, including profit from sale of certain holdings, decreased to $1,002,425, equivalent to $1.80 a common share, contrasted with $1,496,858, or $3.17 a share, the preceding year.

Mills Boost Sheets In Mahoning Valley

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Prices of steel sheet were increased $2 a ton today by two Mahoning Valley manufacturers, effective today on new business and for the second quarter. Other makers are expected to follow suit, as sheet mills have heavy bookings.

The new prices are: Common black sheets, $2.95, Pittsburgh; galvanized, $3.70; blue annealed, $2.20. Hot rolled strip was increased to $1.90 and $2.00. There is no change in full finished sheets, which are used for automobile bodies.



Munificent Nature

NATURE, it seems, does not distribute her favors equally. Some sections of this ancient globe were favored above others and in the apportionment of natural advantages, Pittsburgh received, perhaps, more than her share. No city in the world has so large and convenient a supply of natural gas as Pittsburgh. To the foresight and enterprise of the Philadelphia Company and its subsidiary, the Equitable Gas Company, is due much of the credit for making natural gas available as a domestic and industrial fuel. These companies have been supplying the homes and factories of Pittsburgh with natural gas for almost half a century.

Equitable Gas Co.

It didn't seem to do any good to advertise these rooms for rent in the other papers. They still were unrented. Finally the lady ran an ad in the Sun-Telegraph and rented them right away. That is because the Sun-Telegraph readers are educated to look in the Classified ads. That is a good thing to bear in mind when you are thinking of putting an ad in the paper. Just call

BUGS BAER Says

LET'S SKIP A CABINET

LOOKS like Mr. Hoover went to Florida to get away from that cabinet he hasn't selected yet.

You can bet one thing on that new cabinet.

There will be some big men who will resign from it.

Arthur "Bugs" Baer

From what we can dope on cabinets, past and present and hopelessly future, we suspect that it will consist of eight members carefully selected by Herbert against his will.

Every politician in America is rushing into the suspected zone fearlessly exposing his bare chest to the onslaught of Herbert's index finger.

Herbert is up against a tough job. We met a real cabinet member but once.

The effect was astounding. We went staggering away like a groundhog that had seen too many shadows.

If you have not been mentioned for the Hoover cabinet it is because you have cultivated neither friends nor your whiskers.

The list of prospective members is longer than a widow's veil.

We recommend Frederick Bloop, who carried Florida in a blindfold test. Mr. Bloop is a big man in a small way. He would have made a good Secretary of Navy if the 15-cruiser bill had been defeated.

The Secretary of Agriculture should be a dirt farmer who knows the latest dirt.

The man for that job is Oscar Plankbum. He was once a farmer but got smart. Then he became editor of a tabloid and now holds the world record for writing 15 insults on a postal card.

We don't need any Secretary of the Army because the Marines are doing all the work anyway.

We don't know anything about the Secretary of the Interior. That's a mysterious job. Nobody seems to know anything about it. The Secretary of the Interior is like a worm in an apple. He doesn't attract any attention until he comes out and shows his head.

Of course, we have international relations, industries and commerce. But why bother the cabinet about that when Los Angeles takes care of it all?

On a couple of second thoughts, why have a cabinet?

Why not let Herbert and Curtis run the works and make our National Anthem, "Tea for Two?"

'CLOSED CHAPTER' SAYS CONGRESSMAN

Unbiased witnesses who have promised to substantiate Congressman Frisby's statement and go further if necessary.

WASHINGTON. — Smiling through his tears, Congressman Frisby continued his non-stop endurance walk last night. He took time to shout invectives at his enemies, and on one occasion kicked a small boy.

Earlier in the day the fighting Congressman issued a statement through his attorneys, which declared—

"Anyone who says I have rested since last Tuesday is a short and ugly word. It is true that I DID stop at the Okay House across the tracks—but merely to mail a letter. The clerk handed me a key which I naturally supposed was for the mail box. Reaching room 306 I failed to find a mail box and discovered I had inadvertently locked the door from the inside and misplaced the key. But I kept walking. Having paid for the room, I figured I might as well have my pants pressed, which I did. That I kept faith is evidenced by the fact that when the telephone rang I did not answer, as I did not want to stop walking. If you do not believe this you are at liberty to inquire from the party or parties who called me.

Harris Vote Machine Bill Explained to Armstrong

No rights of County Commissioners are taken from them in the Harris voting machine bill, State Senator Frank J. Harris points out in a letter to County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong. It was a reply to a letter Commissioner Armstrong had recently sent to all members of the Allegheny County delegation in the General Assembly, in which he objected to the bill on several grounds, most of which were misapprehensions, according to Senator Harris' statement in reply.

It is explained the County Commissioners shall have the power of selecting the type of voting machine through soliciting of proposals, as material now is purchased, which Mr. Armstrong, in his letter stated, should continue to be one of the prerogatives of the Commissioners. Mr. Harris explains "that is one of the very things provided in the voting machine bill."

The bill, however, provides that proposals may be received only from makers of approved types of voting machines, meeting certain requirements, inspection for approval being under the supervision of the secretary of the commonwealth, at the cost of the manufacturer, inspectors to include two expert mechanics and a patent attorney.

That provision, of course, is to guard against the installation of machines that do not come within requirements of the bill.

Commissioners are not compelled to issue bonds for the payment for machines, as Mr. Armstrong had complained of, but provision is made that they may issue 10-year bonds for that purpose if they desire to do so. So the matter of purchase and payment of vote machines, as election material, is just as at present, in the hands of the Commissioners.

The only point at issue, then, is the manner of distribution, and this is explained to be a matter of local option, with the proviso that, for instance, in cities they be installed in wards in numerical rotation.

Mr. Armstrong was right in his conception of his duty to the taxpayer. As a spender of the taxpayers' money he must insist that economy be the watchword. But it appears he was wrong in his assumption that the Harris vote machine bill deprived the Commissioners of some privilege in that respect.

Full of Years and Honor, Judge Miller Is Called

The death of Judge Jacob J. Miller deprives the Orphans Court of a presiding officer who recently was honored, together with his associates, by the Allegheny County Bar Association for having put into effect new rules of practice for expediting the business of the court of which he was the head. It was the testimonial of the men of his profession, a wreath crowning a meritorious labor.

Another honor that had come to Judge Miller was the degree of doctor of laws, conferred by the University of Pittsburgh, of which he was a member of the faculty of the School of Law.

But he perhaps prized highest of all the honor of having been placed at the head of the court of which he had been a judge since 1902, having been advanced on the death of the late Judge James W. Over.

So Judge Miller had achieved a full measure of the life in the activity he had chosen as his own and in which he served society with distinction. He had the full measure of years, his age of 71 having exceeded the traditional three-score and ten. He had the full measure duty as a lawyer, associate and presiding judge and instructor in the law.

Further, the esteem of friends and neighbors is not the least of the ingredients of a full measure of life.

Old-Fashioned Girls

Sad News from the W. C. T. U.

Miss Maud Aldrich, head of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, says, almost with tears, that the old-fashioned girl with her good manners is not popular with Good men or Bad men.

She blames this on moving pictures that "glorify jazz baby types."

Why not blame the good men and bad men?

How many W. C. T. U. ladies have skirts up to their knees and pink silk stockings? That is the "jazz baby" insignia. And today's jazz baby may be tomorrow's earnest W. C. T. U. worker.

Foolish Economy

Give H. H. 40 Secretaries.

A Senator who objects to supplying Herbert Hoover with three secretaries, saying it is done "only to make places for somebody" doesn't know much about modern work.

Mr. Hoover will need half a dozen secretaries, and more, and should not have to pay for them. They will work for the country, not for the President.

Tales That Are Told

Making It Clear

"DADDY, is today tomorrow?" asked Tommy.

"Certainly it isn't," answered his father.

"But you said it was."

"When did I ever say today was tomorrow?"

"Yesterday."

"Well, it was—today was tomorrow yesterday, but today is today, just as yesterday was today yesterday but is yesterday today, and tomorrow will be today tomorrow, which makes today yesterday and tomorrow all at once. Now run along and play!"

His Guiding Star

JONES had recently bought a second-hand car.

"I understand that giving pet names to cars is the fashion just now," remarked a friend. "Have you bestowed a name on yours yet?"

"Yes," answered Jones. "I've decided to call my bus 'The Guiding Star.'"

"A jolly good name!" commented the other. I suppose you call it that because it takes you everywhere you want to go?"

"Well, not exactly," replied Jones. "The reason is I always seem to be underneath it."

The Only Girl

HE had just asked her to marry him, and she had murmured "Yes."

"Jack, dear," she ventured, after a long silence, "am I the only girl—"

"The young man's arms tightened about her.

"Joan," he interrupted, fiercely, "don't ask me whether you are the only girl I ever loved. You know it as well as I do."

"That wasn't what I was going to say, Jack," she answered, "I was going to ask if I was the only girl who would have you."

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

THERE ain't been many jokes about the peace pact yet, and even the fellows that signed it kept their faces straight all the time. But they do tell about a fellow out in California that went to the recruiting office of the marines and asked for a job.

The sargeant looked him over and says, "Why, I guess we won't bother with you. You're too little, and you're too old, and you're lame and cross-eyed and got no personality to speak of. You got rheumatism and colic, ain't you? No, you don't look like a fighting man to us."

"But who said anything about fighting?" says the applicant. "Lord, I ain't looking for no fight, but what's this here Kellogg pact for, anyway, if I can't join the marines?"

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

DAN JACKSON can't seem to make a go of matrimony. He's only 25 and he has just gone through his second divorce.

No, Dan isn't a vicious or dissipated person. He doesn't drink, gamble or chase. He has never beaten his wives nor wasted his money. He is, as a matter of fact, a perfect "home boy." But unfortunately it isn't his wife's home he prefers—it's his mother's.

TOO MUCH MAMA—that's the name of Dan's complaint.

She's a nice mama, even Dan's ex-wives admit that. Pretty, popular, good-natured, absolutely devoted to Dan—and there's the hitch. She is so devoted to Dan and she has made him so devoted to her that it is impossible for him to be happy with any other woman. No matter how nice the wife, or how pleasant the home, Dan is always unconsciously homesick for mama.

That couldn't have happened if Dan had been born a Samoan baby. We Americans believe that close family ties are beautiful and desirable. We feel that "there's something wrong with a person who isn't crazy about his folks!" But the Samoans think quite the reverse. They think that it's narrowing and unhealthy for one individual to care too much for another, and they have made a plan which discourages too close bonds between individuals.

Margaret Mead tells about that plan in her remarkable book—"COMING OF AGE IN SAMOA." Theres a book which every father and mother should read.

To most of us, Samoans seem savages, yet, in certain respects, they know far more than we do about training and adjusting children to life. If Dan had been born a Samoan he would not have been crippled for life by a mother craving. He would have had difficulty in knowing who his real mother was, for he would have been mothered by a whole community of relations.

"From the first months of its life," says Margaret Mead, "when the child is handed carelessly from one woman's hands to another's, the lesson is learned of not caring for one person greatly, not setting high hopes on any one relationship."

It is almost impossible for a Samoan child to acquire a "mother fixation." Everyone wipes the Samoan's baby's nose, everyone kisses his bumps. And, because he does not depend on anyone person too greatly, he learns to depend on himself. Love is not eliminated from his life, but it is scattered. He grows up feeling that the whole community is his family, and he rarely feels an intense fondness for any one individual.

That will shock some of us. We will feel that the Samoans are truly savages, who know nothing of the loveliest experiences of life. But, as a fatter of fact, the wisest and best people in history have always advised just such a plan. They have always warned us against too close family ties, saying that such ties dwarfed life.

Christ said that. Once, when he was speaking to a multitude, someone asked Him, "Behold thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee." But he answered and said unto him that told him, "Who is my mother? And who are my brethren?" and He stretched forth his hand toward his disciples and said, "Behold my mother and my brethren!"

That was a wise and noble answer. It was the answer of a great doctor of souls.

A CELESTIAL SALVO

By Garrett P. Serviss

IT is regrettable that more is not known about one of the most remarkable occurrences in the recent history of the earth. I refer to the fall of a gigantc meterorite, or rather a swarm of great meteorites, which happened in northeastern Siberia 20 years ago. A year or so ago I wrote in this column what then was known of the occurrence, and the latest information about it goes no further than to corroborate the original account, which was almost incredible in its details. Prof. Kulik, a Russian scientist, who has visited the scene (or a part of it), which lies in a region difficult of access, reports that all animal life, together with all vegetation, was destroyed throughout an area of 2,500 square miles. That would be a square 50 miles on a side, equal to twice the area of the entire state of Rhode Island! And beyond the area of total destruction, over a radius of a hundred miles—covering more than 60,000 square miles—the primeval forest, which clothes that part of Siberia, was leveled to the ground.

On the thirtieth of July, 1908, the earth was struck this tremendous blow. The indications are that it was not a single meteorite, but a salvo of them that fell upon that almost uninhabited region in Siberia. No human eye, as far as is known, witnessed the fall of the meteorites. But the shock was felt hundreds of miles away and recorded by seismorgraphs as far as Irkutsch, 800 miles away.

Natives of that part of Siberia where the blow fell told of flashing lights seen in the daylight sky and tremblings of the earth. Some told of an awful wind which leveled everything in its path, and of the obstruction of a river by rocks and debris of the destroyed forest.

There is only one other instance of the striking of the earth by a gigantic missile from space, leaving a conspicuous mark on its face. That is the case of the Arizona meteorite which bored a great hole in the rocks resembling a volcanic crater, near Canyon Diablo. But the Arizona missile appears to have been a single solid shot, while in the Siberian case it was rather as if the mighty guns of some invisible dreadnaught lying beyond the blue had been concentrated upon the earth and fired together or in rapid succession.

What is the meaning of this seeming bombardment from space which our planet undergoes?—for smaller missiles of the kind are falling upon the atmospheric shield all the time. It would be worth while for any person whose mind is moved by intelligent curiosity about the world we live in and the universe that encloses it, to pay a visit to the American Museum of Natural History in New York simply for the purpose of studying the huge meteorites that are displayed in its entrance hall. Look especially at the mighty mass of solid iron that Peary brought from Greenland, where it must have fallen from the sky in ancient, unrecorded time. It weighs more than thirty-six tons! Think of a gun big enough to hurl a projectile of that size!

Bible Passages

Powers

(Romans 13)

LET every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God.

Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.

For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.

For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour.

Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

For this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love they neighbour as thyself.

Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light.

Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying.

But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

A Wayfarer

A WAYFARER, from many a stormy voyage
And many a peril freed on land and sea,
May, on returning, find that all he sought
Has waited in old scenes' tranquility.

The spell the orchid held of old is there,
The peace and quiet of the grove the same,
Unstirred by echoes of the distant roar
Of that tumultuous world from whence he came.

So I, outworn by buffetings of life,
Return to this sweet garden by the sea
And find, untouched by any wind of strife,
The beacon of your love still burns for me.

LINCOLN

By Herbert Kaufman

WE do not know his sires. The line down which he came is lost somewhere among the shards of older lands.

Noble or serf, no one has traced the sport forebear, in whose blind loins the flame was born, that found, at last, its fuel in his waiting soul.

All spans to his far people remain broken—unmended. Back-tracking history merely follows familiar roads—encounters that shiftless dolt, his father—hears confusing tales of prior origins—then loses the trail in a maze of surmise, mystery—and insinuation.

His son is gone, leaving only distaff seed. So not a single scion survives, to bear his name into tomorrow.

But memory shall wither and tradition die before its glory rusts.

His career, now, is a ward of eternity—a yardstick to measure human possibility, who else rose farther from the deep mires to rank with saints and worthy kings?

The pine knots by which he read The Way are quenchless beacons to light all ambition through black hours of despair and obscurity.

Lincoln, himself, is not enshrined in the stately temple beside the shaft of Washington; his image still haunts a frontier cabin, a manger of chinked logs, a hut too poor to have a door.

There it was that destiny set the anvil on which a living sword was forged, to slay inhumanity and deal the death stroke to slavery.

Never was humbler instrument chosen for supreme tasks since Christ was called and anointed.

Time and perspective have canonized Lincoln—this farm drudge, this rail-splitter, this gaunt, gangling waif of a backwoods illiterate.

His figure towers with the years—casts an ever-lengthening shadow over all world thought.

Biography has drawn aside the homely masks he wore—revealed the secret majesty, the hidden heartaches that jest and lip-smile cloaked—and probed the agony within the saddest eyes that ever caught a glance of God's.

The star of Bethlehem hovered over wilderness, the night he came.

But the Wise Men, alack, brought no gift to his cradle.

They waited to lay their tributes on his bier.

O. O. McINTYRE

VERSAILLES, Feb. 12.—The drive over the roadway, completely arched by the spreading rows of trees, to Versailles offers a tinge of melancholy. Sunless, it has the clammy chill of a tomb and thoughts turn dourly to Paris mobs with royal captives, the guillotine, the extravagant Louis, to Pompadour and Du Barry.

Versailles forms the network of France's early history—its palace is an epitome of royal rise and fall. On that drizzling and memorable morning when the Parisian rabble gathered in front of the Hotel de Ville bemoaning there was no bread, a screaming woman shouted: "To Versailles!" And the Revolution was on.

Over the same roadway along which we spun in a modern motor, fled royalty and great nobles in clumsy two-wheeled carts more than two centuries ago. It is noticeable visitors turning into the majestic approach to the castle come to a full stop and hush—awed by the decaying splendor of forgotten kings.

There is no laughter, and talk is in whispers, for somehow starvation and a reign of terror seem still murmuring in the background. Ghosts stalk everywhere. There is the melancholy room 124 where the royal voluptuary Louis XIV breathed his last in the agony of a horrible gangrene. It still smells of death.

Then there are the Trianons, where the monarchs sought escape from the tyranny they created. Unromantic guides rush tourists through them with their sing song patter of clocks, tables, carpets and candelabra. Yet it was here kings and their mistresses changed the history of the world. High living at its highest.

In the Musee des Voitures are the magnificent gilded state carriages, now worm eaten and decayed. One understands why Broadway refers to its classy clientele as "the carriage trade." And of course the famous gardens. Here one may wander the same paths where tiny princes and princesses played.

It is only alternate Sundays one may see the fountains spray their colorful geometrics against the plush of night. No one should miss the Galleries des Glaces—Hall of Mirrors—with its incomparable view. Here the German empire was proclaimed in 1871 and the Treaty of Versailles signed in 1919.

* * *

One leaves Versailles and its trappings with a historical jag—lisping in numbers, as it were. But the outstanding impression is of waste and tyranny. You feel like sneaking up on the republican form of government and giving it a great big bear hug or something. Yoo, hoo, Miss Liberty!

One of the persistent guides who dogs your footsteps spoke such unaccented English I inquired if he happened to be a Versailles boy. He shook his head. "Born and brought up in Newark, N. J.," he said. He married a local girl after the war and settled here. In Versailles you are either a cafe keeper or a guide, and with a typical Broadway wink he tapped his badge license and confided: "It's a good racket." Any accomplished liar may become a Versailles guide.

* * *

An army of beggars hang about the palace gates, whining despair and displaying their hideous deformities. Unless you give alms, the crunch of their canes and crutches on the cobblestone is heard up to the palace doors.

Versailles has the sleepy languor of a cross road hamlet unspoilt by the petrol pump. Streets are extraordinarily wide with houses plumb on the street, dating back before the Revolution. Innumerab' old men and women sit on sidewalk benches nodding the days away. Everyone owns a dog and the streets reverberate with yips. Goats are milked at the door. The scowling concierge eyes the stranger suspiciously. Old stone houses have a muggy chill, and the sky has the pallidness of twilight. Yet whether one goes to Versailles to recreat the past or revel in the present, it offers rare charm. There is an esplanade given over to endless rows of sidewalk cafes. Forty-five minutes from Paris, the people are entirely different. They live completely in the eternally sad shadows of a glamorous past.

But the gendarms are alert. In one of the little squares I unleashed my dog for a romp. It seems the space was sacred to a big historical event—I forgot what and was probably in Gallipolis at the time anyway. The way they grouped about me, jabbering, didn't exactly alarm me. I was just plum scairt silly. I did some tall apologizing in 2 per cent French and 98 per cent English, picked up my dog, took the first Paris-bound taxi and rattled away from there.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

OLD MAN, you can't buck nature successfully.

That old machine of yours needs greater care and more attention as you go along.

It has been a great piece of mechanism, human mechanism.

You have subjected it to many abuses and it has kept running.

You had begun to think it far superior to the majority.

It has been your boast that your machine is as good as ever and it is unnecessary for you to conserve strength.

You have subjected yourself to greater nervous strain than wiser men would force upon their systems.

Now you may be a little alarmed because your recuperative powers are not as rapid after illness as they have been heretofore.

Friends of yours who some years ago became more careful now seem to have ability to recover from illness quicker than you can.

They have husbanded their strength while you merely expended.

Why not use more common sense in your treatment of self?

You are not so strong as you were, so why try to fool yourself?

Don't allow your mind to set you in the old men's class, but just be sensible and let nature be your guide.
